 ANDOVER, May 7, 1904. The students
 Phillips Academy celebrated the ball victory over Yale in an enthusiastic manner last evening. The ayers were carried from the field after the game on the shoulders of their overjoyed schoolmates, and after supper all the students formed in line and marched the houses of Principal Stearns and other members of the faculty and prominent residents of the Hill, who greeted them, praising the work of the team. For a time there was no

The Philomathean society held its regular Friday night meeting last night in Society hall. Instead of trying on a regular literary program the meeting was entirely given over to the trials for the Philo-Forum debate speakers. The subject discussed was, Resolved, "that the United States senators should be elected by popular vote." Each speaker was allowed the choice of the side on which he spoke, and was limited to ten minutes for argument. There were thirteen candidates, speaking in the following order, and on the side of the question designated as follows: Ferguson, affirmative; Fairbanks, negative; G. # LOOKING BACK, Moving Forward

Andover looks back at its traditions.

What was it that first drew us all to Phillips Academy? Surely it wasn't just Andover's excellent academic reputation, large and gracious campus, or strong athletic teams. Certainly those are attractive assets, but it was something more that brought us here and kept us loyal to our school for four years and well into the future. It was the feeling that we are part of something larger than the present and bigger than ourselves that made us gravitate toward the old academy on the hill. Visiting the campus as prospective students, we could sense the history that lived and breathed within the school buildings and the legacy left by students long graduated. Those who came before us, who built, studied and lived in the splendid old facilities instilled within the very walls a strong sense of tradition. To future generations they willed this institution, taking the necessary steps to ensure the school would remain in good hands, led by people who believed in its mission, that was, to innovate, stimulate, activate, innervate, invigorate, and by doing so, educate. This is why we came here, this is why we left our families and the comforts of home. In pursuit of this objective we resisted the temptation to learn lazily. We engaged ourselves in our own schooling with a commitment so deeply driven we were surprised by the force of our own capability. And by the myriad possibilities.

1. Lissette Duran '05 bonds with new students. 2. Pemberton Cottage sells Krispy Kreme donuts on Quad Day. 3. Blue Keys gather to escort new students to the Matriculation Ceremony. 4. Justin Yi, Louisa Rockwell, and Melissa Chiozzi '06 can't get enough of Eleodrive. 5. After Halloween, Sims Witherspoon and Thameka Thompson '05 plan to go on the South Beach diet. 6. Flagstaff Blue Keys Christiana Hollis, Nell Beattie, Kojo DeGraft-Hanson, and Elliot Beck make a common room couch very useful during Orientation 2004. 7. Seniors Beau Freker and Yusuke Uchiyama prefer to sell kisses. 8. Kaia Lubanko '05 and Alex Wolf '06 are a graceful pair in Borden Gym. 9. Andres Bobadilla and Rob Anderson '06 love the little mermaid.

we were offered. So we joined the long procession that forever marches up the vista and over the Great Lawn. We gave ourselves to this history, knowing our time here will shape our minds and mold our personalities into the people we will become. And though we may wander far from the PA campus, it is never too distant because of the vast webbed network of alums spread out all over the country and world who have shared this amazing experience with us, whether they were here 50 years prior to our arrival or came 10 years after we left. We will never forget.

Phillips Academy's rich past is visible in all areas of student life. In Commons, grooves worn into the marble steps by thousands of hungry students remind us that we were not the only students to eat, laugh and talk within its four dining halls. The antique desks in Pearson Hall bear the scarred initials carved into them of bored, nay, creative students who are now retired or have children of their own at PA. The Andover-Exeter rivalry is one that began in 1878 after our first football game against the New Hampshire school which, incidentally, we won.

Andover ties the young to the old. It is not uncommon that a student walking through the supermarket in an Andover sweatshirt will be stopped by an alum to swap stories about anything from Bulfinch to Mr. Smith. Even new buildings, shiny and modern, seem to emphasize our lasting dedication to age-old disciplines.

1. Luke Cahill '06 gets knocked around by a mechanical bull. 2. Seniors Diana Grace and Alison Murphy enjoy a short walk back to Paul Revere. 3. Jackie Price and John Lippe, Class of 2006 bond over being from Oklahoma. 4. Lower girls are pretty in pink in Borden Gym. 5. The beginning of a long and competitive battle. 6. Mr. Cauz leads new students to Tang for Matriculation. 7. Seniors Lee Rotenberg and Katie Hunckler happy to begin their senior year. 8. Oh, freshmen boys. What are you doing? 9. Jess Taggart, Julie Wadland and Stephanie Krant like pink. 10. Seniors Ciarra Schmidt and Kaitlin Alsofrom fill out their absentee ballots for the upcoming election. 11. Uppers Priscilla P'Anson and Jordan Dietsch enjoy Ryley.

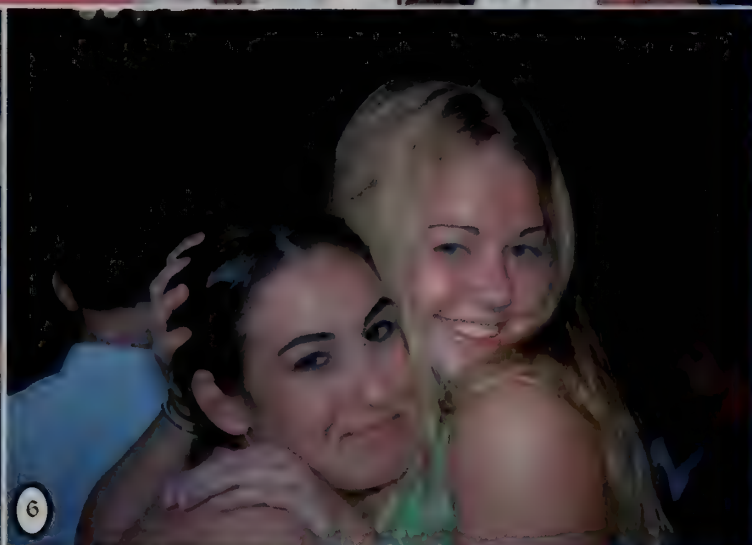

And here we stand, Pot Pourri 2005, facing forward, living the moment, and learning about our past. We leafed through early volumes of the Pot Pourri, poured over scrapbooks from the 1900s, spoke with alumni, and emerged with a widened scope of our school's story. From the trivial (Bulfinch has served as a(n): A. dining hall B. gymnasium C. an english building or D. all of the above? Answer: D.) to the fantastic (apparently streaking used to be a common and acceptable form of self-expression) bits of history we discovered, it was all fascinating. Poodle skirts and navy suits have slowly evolved into jeans and cozy sweatshirts. What was once the norm has become "vintage" and "retro." Perhaps 50 years from now Pot Pourri 2055 will use this volume as a source of inspiration in their retrospective yearbook. Andover life is steeped in the age-old traditions and reminders of its noble origins. We humbly aim to celebrate and acknowledge the history that makes Andover the singular school it is, has forever been and will continue to be.

1. Marcella Viktorin and Lindsay Baker '05 prep for a night out on campus. 2. Upper girls surround seniors Chaz Gurry and Katie Hunckler. 3. Seniors Lee Rotenberg and Meta Weiss. 4. A large posse of inseparable uppers. 5. Juniors Joe Santaniello, Kelsey Thorn, Caitlin Feeney, and Jen Downing play it cool in Ryley. 6. Gina Crivelli and Sam Paskal '05 snuggle at the senior dessert. 7. Christiana Hollis '05 looks ecstatic about being hit in the face with pie. 8. Upper Simon Keyes practices Flamenco? 9. Katherine Adams '06 sports a devilish grin. 10. Upper Alex Wolf struts his stuff at the GSA dance. 11. Jeffrey Bakkensen '06 really frightens someone.

StudentLife

Welcome to fall term, our most polarized trimester that includes both warm, sunshiny early September and bitter, cold late November. Juniors slowly determine the best way to get from Commons to Morse Hall without getting stranded in the mire of Flagstaff Court. Lowers embark on their last full year of blissfully free time. Uppers take a deep breath and hunker down in their attempts weather what some people refer to as “the hellishly difficult and supremely unfunny teacher’s joke designed to break our spirit and extinguish the fires of our souls.” And the seniors, ah yes, the seniors. They bear the heaviest burden of all, oppressive college applications. Even through all this, the spirit of ’05 still shines through loud and clear... loud and clear indeed!

Each morning, a symphony of blaring alarm clocks sounds the beginning of a new day. We are soldiers armed with books, calculators, field hockey sticks and cellos, fighting hard to ward off our unabating and perpetual enemy – procrastination. But we are not confined to our everyday rituals. We will not remember what we ate for breakfast on the second Friday morning of fall term senior year. We’ll recall only the memorable moments: a last second (literally) touchdown pass to defeat Hotchkiss early in fall term, the rowdy celebrations after the Red Sox victory, and the infamous ’05 inaugural meeting.

Besides these noteworthy incidents, our lives are punctuated with standard events. We dance to hip-hop and pop favorites spun by an aging DJ who beseeches the sexually-charged crowd to stop “grinding.” We lounge around Ryley, staring at the big screen, or venture into Boston on shopping expeditions. Our afternoons are spent people-watching and socializing in Commons. The goal: to get the most out of our fleeting four years, no matter how heavy our workloads or how busy our schedules may be. We forge through our high school careers, anticipating a time when we can look back, smile, and reflect over our triumphs and failures, remembering friends.

Tie-dyed Pride

Sounding the beginning of 333 new Andover careers

Under a crisp blue sky and a brilliant warm sun, a swarm of Blue Keys decked out in technicolor tie-dye bounced up and down on the corner of Main Street frantically waving signs. "Honk if you love Andover!!!" they bellowed at passing traffic, and the air was filled with a concert of horns and an uproar of passionate cheers. After the stunning display, the newcomers were whisked away from their parents and off through the chaotic orientation process. Newbies registered, settled in, sat through event after tedious event, and of course, endless rounds of hellos and handshakes. Highlights included learning Andover spirit cheers and the new Thinkfast trivia game. To cap off the whole display, Blue Keys cheered as the new students proceeded up the Great Lawn to their matriculation ceremony in Tang Theater. It was an electric, energy-filled day for all participants, veterans and first-timers alike.

"I especially liked when the Blue Keys came to get us out of our dorms for the 'run.' It was really exciting because we didn't know what was going to happen."
-Tantum Collins '08

1. Derek Nnuro and Katie Koh '05 gear up for their big year as Blue Key heads.
2. JeanMarie Gossard and Catalina McCallum '05 demand Andover pride.
3. Sarah Chang and Marcella Viktorin '05 arrive on the scene.
4. Seniors line up for the matriculation receiving line.
5. Dave Wilkinson, Ned Henningsen, and Kelly Stecker '05 did not have voices the next day.
6. Mac King and Alex Lebow '05 seek out potential honkers.
7. Geoff Miller, Chris Zegel, and CC Donahue are wonderful welcomers.
8. Blue Key Society
9. West Quad and Pine Knoll Blue Keys.

Senior Dessert

Together, the class of '05 kicks off their senior year with a bang

As the Class of 2005 made their way back to Andover, for many their fourth journey of its kind, they entered their senior year with much anticipation and enthusiasm. What better way to kick off the year than with a party at the Chase home? At the senior dessert oh-fivers gathered together as a class to catch up, reconnect and examine each other in their finery. Sipping lemonade and munching on cookies, seniors embraced each other and their favorite teachers. With the home stretch finally in sight, '05 swapped stories of summer and years past. The weather was perfect, and though attendees had to fight off biting mosquitoes, they enjoyed the opportunity to reflection their experiences and wish each other luck as they collectively prepared themselves for a grueling senior fall. This was a great way to start off the last year on a good foot.

1. Seniors looking lovely. 2. Alison Wheeler and Steve Sherrill catch up with Mr. Chase. 3. Ms. Goetze and new senior, Priscilla Cheng introduce themselves. 4. Mr. Henningsen, Peter Nelson, and Kate Ireland. 5. Mrs. Chase and Bobby Spang reunite! 6. Senior girls enjoy each other's company. 7. Bishop boys. 8. Mr. Murphy, Alex King, and Chris Donahue. 9. Natalie Exner, Alexis Malozemoff and Dave Billingsly like to rock out. 10. Nate Scott, Martin Donohoe, and Nathan Kellogg.

Wild Nights

What to do, oh, what to do...

“Weekends are supposed to be your ‘downtime,’ a time to sit back and relax, but most of the time there’s just way too much to do anyways.” -Andrew Hung

After spending our weeknights doing homework and attending club meetings, the weekend is a much needed and appreciated time for relaxation, sleep, and 'kickin it'. The typical Saturday is spent at the playing fields. Those not playing are there watching the games and rooting for their friends. Sadly, upperclassmen have work to do Saturday afternoon. By the time 8 P.M. rolls around everyone abandons their studies. Now we get ready to go out, watch a DVD, or have a parietal. The dorm is anything but quiet on a Saturday night, so you might as well let go, turn up your music, and chill out. Ryley is always packed. There's a dance underway somewhere and a baseball game on. On Sunday, we wake up late, slowly savor a delicious Commons brunch, and then commence to work. Some students take their assignments downtown and study there. Amidst a chorus of moans, we say goodbye to the weekend on Sunday night and start the grind again Monday morning, counting down the days until the next Friday.

1. Upper boys Ben Weiner, Jonathan Dent, Greg Pucillo and Joey Lokitis 2. A bevy of boys adorned in their favorite throw-backs. 3. Louisa Rockwell, Melissa Chiozzi, and Cornelia Wolcott, all '06. 4. BFFs Alyssa Hill, Katie Faulkner, and Katherine Adams all '06. 5. Dhariana Gonzalz '08, Bintou Ojomo '07, and Stephanie Cuevas '05 6. Lower boys use hand signals to communicate. 7. Junior boys Ben Laccetti, Chip Schroeder, and Obinna Igbokwe 8. Preppy Upper girls 9. Lovers Annie Boylan, Alexa Reid, and Ryan Ferguson at the pink dance.

North & South

Quad Day: Battle of the Booths

With attractions ranging from a mechanical bull to Owen Remeika '06 in a cardboard box, the Quad Day '04 festivities drew students from all over campus. Traditionally, each dorm in the Quads hosts a booth to raise money. Thompson House had the most unique booth with their sushi-making, while Taylor Hall's kissing stand made a huge profit. Johnson beautified the day with beads and by face painting as Adams sold plants for other students' rooms. The day was sweet with root beer floats from Bishop, chocolate from Bancroft, and Rockwell's Krispy Kreme doughnuts. Some students left completely drenched after taking a ride down the slip n' slide, and others showed off their dry "Feista (too bad it was misspelled) Del Quad Day" shirts. Good fun was had by all.

Taylor's Top 5 Pick-up Lines:

2. Are you from Tennessee? Because you're the only ten-I-see.
1. Is your name Gillette? Because you're the best a man can get.

1. Bancroft girls peddle their chocolate covered delights. 2. Bishop boys vie for dominance on the inflatable joust. 3. John Lippe '06 4. Cam Smith and Joe O'Hern with Owen Remeika. 5. Seniors Katie Hunckler and Lizzy Maxwell spread even more joy than they already do. 6. Alex Malozemoff, Jason Duffett, Will Riordan, and Julian Dames. 7. Scott Morgan. 8. Alex King and Dan Hoyos. 9. Steve Severo's sign is demanding. 10. These girls were willing to clean to raise money. 11. Beau Freker and Nick Shea smooch Katherine Adams.

Andover Chic

As a school reputed for academic excellence, Andover has developed its own style to match. The first muggy days of fall see students in shorts and skirts, savoring their fading tans and soaking up the last few rays of sun before a long New England Winter. Never fear, though-as the temperature drops students refuse to let it cramp their style. Bring out the boots--fuzzy uggs, bright wellies and black heels for the daring and well-balanced few. Through the haze of flurries it is easy to make out the bright hats and scarves that have quickly become fashion necessities. The first day of spring, aka any temperature above 45 degrees, unleashes a colorful array of tiered skirts and pastel polo shirts. From that point on, Andover fashion becomes a spring free-for-all: the brightest hues, the boldest patterns, a sea of pink and green, and an endless supply of flip-flops litter the great lawn. Oh, to be smart and fashionable! Could it get any better?

Old school female: poodle skirts, high-waists, saddle shoes and dark socks--and don't forget the properly poofy hair.

Parents Weekend

Kids school their parents in Andover living.

There is always a lot of buzz surrounding Parents' Weekend. The powers that be go all out to showcase our beautiful campus and with classes, home sports games, and lunches to attend, our parents are kept busy. This year the school tried something different by sponsoring an inaugural tour guide program. In uniforms of fleece vests and blue shirts, Blue Keys escorted parents from class to class. Unfortunately, freezing rain on Saturday made going to classes and watching the games a little less pleasant. As usual, the boys water polo team paraded through the Cage in their speedos at lunchtime. The ever-popular Grasshopper Night was a hit as well, and overall the weekend went smoothly. In any case, no student would turn down a three-day weekend, so having out parents present was just an added bonus.

"I was good to see my dad bonding with other parents." - Akosua Ayim, '07

Geeky Freaks

students show what it takes to be a true geek

"Exeter Geek Day" is always the Thursday of Andover-Exeter spirit week. There are two costume options-- the actual geek and the all out "freak." Some students dress as a typical Exie probably would, but others will shock you with

The Friday night pep rally ignites firey blue spirit.

Mrs. Chase is speaking to a gym packed full of excited students divided into sections by class. Just as she starts a story about crossing the road, Franklin comes barrelling out and chases our Head of School off the stage. So begins the 2004 fall Pep Rally. The lights go off suddenly and the crowd roars in excitement as Kassie Archambault marches to the center of the gym towards a flag-wielding Gunga. She pipes the Braveheart theme song while Blue Key heads tell the audience that we must prepare for "The Battle" which "begins tomorrow." Varsity teams perform their skits enthusiastically, and the Blue Key heads providing entertaining intermission acts. The rally ends with a bang as the lights go off and a video is projected onto the huge end wall. The crowd yells as highlights of astonishing Andover victories throughout fall term flash across the screen. We leave the pep rally pumped full of school spirit and ready to demolished PEA.

Bright blue fans show their spirit on our home turf

After a snowy night, Andover students poured out of dorms and cars and trekked across the snow-covered landscape and crowded the sports fields and the gym. The air was filled with the sound of battle--Blue Key Heads banging on their drums and tin pails and Big Blue supporters bellowing cheers and blowing on their stadium horns. In the gym, the crowd exploded through the roof as girls' volleyball came back from an 0-2 deficit to win 3-2. On the soccer and field hockey fields, Andover girls racked up big

"W"'s to end their regular seasons despite playing on slushy fields in icy weather. At every match, Big Blue fans showed 110% of their enthusiasm, sporting "Beat Exeter" buttons and Andover regalia. They waved their oversized blue hands and munched on blue sharks, all while screaming "LET'S GO BIG BLUE" at deafening volumes. Andover/Exeter '04 was a huge success at which faculty, students, parents, and alumni all joined together in this tradition of Andover school spirit.

Political Debate heats up on campus

Vanessa Kerry, daughter of presidential candidate John Kerry, told a chapel full of students the reason she hopped on her dad's campaign trail was because of the "political apathy" surrounding her. This campus is far from apathetic when it comes to politics. Election-time is a very active, charged, and in this year's case, an emotional time on our campus. (When Kerry ceded, tears were shed.)

You didn't have to go far to find someone who was ready and willing to discuss this policy or that one, or debate which candidate was better fit for office. By the time Tuesday came around, most kids were ready for a break from political debate...it got to be all you heard. It's hard to believe that with such an opinionated campus, only a small percentage can vote. Our mock election results depicted a strong left wing favoritism.

On September 6, the newcomers arrived to campus to find an unexpected surprise. The enthusiastic Blue Key Society, stood on the corner of Main street to welcome the incoming students and their families. The swirl of colors only exacerbated the charged atmosphere that swept over Andover for the weekend. The day was full of excitement and anticipation as the fresh faces of P.A. rushed around trying to register, unpack, and get rid of their parents. Blue Keys swarmed the campus and cheered at the tops of their lungs, setting the mood for the orientation events. Blue Keys led the new students to the Great Lawn, leading them in Andover - Exeter traditional cheers. The crowd was teeming with spirit, people even tried to steal flags from other clusters to show how much they believe that their cluster is number one. Orientation ended with a boom as the new students convened on the Great Lawn and walked in to the matriculation ceremony in Tang, emphasizing the P.A. motto finis origine pendet -- the end depends upon the beginning.

The most popular campus hangout and make-shift student center

Ryley, affectionately called 'Ryles', is home to many favorite snacks and some really cool employees, like Roberto. Ryley is a place for dancing, tv watching, chatting, and eating. After 8:00 on weeknights, seniors claim the room as their domain and snip at underclassmen who try to pry their way in. Ryley's TV is always on, from Sports Center during Conference period, to The O.C. on Thursdays and random Lifetime movies.

at night. There are always people in Ryley on Saturday nights. Not only is it a great place to socialize, the food is good too! No matter what weekend activities are going on, everyone makes sure to stop by the Ryley Room before the end of their night. The cookies, the pizza, the service with a smile--all these things and more make Ryley a campus hotspot, almost always open and certainly never empty.

Winter Games

A good day for Andover...

Winter Andover-Exeter doesn't usually get that much hype, but this year it deserved some attention. The games were supposed to be tight, and the outcome was hardly predictable. The fans that traveled to Exeter were the dedicated, enthusiastic ones, like the senior boys with their blow horns. The day was long and without a meal, but it was fun. The girls' hockey game turned out to be a blowout in our favor. And while the boys' hockey team was whooping up on Exeter, the girls' basketball team kept winning. The last game of the day, boys' basketball, was a let down. One two of the major spectating events were the boys and girls hockey games. Like all of the other Andover sports teams, they played hard with outstanding sportsmanship.

There are very few things that Andover students enjoy that involve being packed in a bus like sardines in a can. But snowtubing at the Winter Carnival happens to be one of them. On a frigidly cold Friday, packs of eager Andover kids piled into buses that waited behind the gym. The Winter Carnival had moved to Nashoba Valley, and whispers were being passed around about the new venue. Chatter and laughter warmed the interior of the buses as they made their way through the gelid night winds. At last, we arrived and the crowd scattered. Students clamored for a good line position at the top of the mountain. Seniors broke out into song, trying to combat the coldness of the night, as they waited for their turn. The eve passed rapidly, in a whirlwind of random people whooshing down a path of snow, chasing each other around, and yelling random stanzas of "Onlu U" by Ashanti. Finally, after the last person had barreled down the slope one last time, the excited but tired crowd was herded back onto the buses and brought back to campus, ending a night full of fun with a bang.

Day Off

Head of School Day is a much-needed hiatus...

It was just another Wednesday night in Commons: kids relaxing after practice with chatter and ice cream. Everything was going just like normal until suddenly silence overcame Lower Right. For a very rare, very short moment all dining and merriment halted and everybody turned and stared in awe as a venerable field hockey stick, wielded by Mrs. Chase, entered the dining hall. Then Lower Right broke loose in a fit of riotous cheering. Seniors dashed from Lower Right to Lower Left bellowing "no school tomorrow!" as Lower Left, too, broke out in cheer. Commons was engulfed in a fest of hugging, screaming, crying in joy, and chanting "No school! No school!" Of course, students all over campus used this extraordinary opportunity to grab some much needed Z's, catch up on work, hang out downtown or watch DVDs in their rooms. Either way, it was a much-appreciated break from the tedious winter term. As Tom Church '05 put it, simply, "Head of School Day was AWESOME!"

Blue & Silver

Clad in blazers and little black dresses, students dance the night away.

1. Freshmen girls love semiformal. 2. Natalie Oliva '07 and Anthony Green '05 enjoy each others' company and kind of like to dress up, too. 3. Wes Howe '05, Megan Evans '06, and Peter Nelson '05 socialize outside the Phillipian room. 4. A happy couple briefly pose for a picture. 5. Michael Preston, Tom Levesque, Dave Wilkinson, and Nate Scott, all '05, show off their coordinating outfits. 6. Seniors always liven up a dance.

Blue and Silver topped the charts as one of the most popular dances of the year. Flocks of freshmen gathered in the Nathan Hale common room nervously awaiting their dates, while upperclassmen, the veterans of Andover formal dances, came ready to dance the night away. Whether coming with a date or going stag, students from every grade were able to kick back, have fun, and learn some new dance moves in the process. With a DJ from Boston's popular Kiss 108 FM, the music of the evening never failed to impress. A much-needed release from winter term, Blue and Silver was enjoyable for all who attended, and even managed to noticeably raise the room temperature several degrees.

"It was really fun to see everybody dressed up...Blue and Silver was definitely everything I expected it to be and more."
-Cassidy Carpenter '08

"This was my favorite dance so far at Andover. The music was great, and my date was really hot too."

-Yoni Gruskin '07

"Blue and Silver is a great chance to go over-the-top classy without having to worry about being overdressed or out of place."
-Simon Keyes '06

WeAre

by Thameka N. Thompson '05

According to a recent study this year's student body can be broken down into a defined class-based structure. I have taken the liberty of dividing the classes into something of a feudal system...European history anyone?

Class of 2008...Unfortunately my friends you are the lowliest of them all. However, despite all odds, ye of 2008 have proven to be quite a worthy servant class. Your incoming was well received by the ravenous upperclassmen who generally prey on young fledglings like yourselves. Thankfully you travel in large packs (strength in numbers my friends!). But do not fear '08, my system (unlike that of the Middle Ages) allows for accession to bigger and greater things. Yes, there is a world beyond Nathan Hale! I see huge successes in varsity sports and 400 level languages in the future for you.

2007...I dub thee the Knights of Andover. You have endured the pain and stress of serfdom and have ascended to Knighthood: a brotherhood that will cement the unity of your class, a time when gears shift from child's play to a man's work. In this level, you have proved to be valiant and brave, etching your ever-lasting markings into the classrooms, the playing fields, and most importantly the tables of Commons. However, do not overstep your bounds. Yelling at ASM is a privilege, not a right, and is entitled only to the exiting class (i.e '05). Next year, you will be closer to attaining that privilege when you transgress into the state of being a Nobleman.

Yes, 2006, Noblemen you are (Noblewomen also to be P.C.). Contrary to popular belief, the state of being a Nobleman is tough indeed. Though you have reached the upper limits of your P.A. career, you still have another year of burden to go. Noblemen I fear may suffer from a form of middle child syndrome; you are not allotted the same privileges as the highest tier of students, yet you are not treated with the same tenderness and care that encompasses junior and lower year. More work, less privileges; it's what makes the world go 'round. Your only saving grace...the prospect of reaching the greatness that is '05.

2005! What can I say fellow classies....we are the kings and queens. Our power is unmatched throughout the land of Andover. The year has proved glorious and victorious (note the use of -ous defined as full of in Kip's etymology class, a very useful class indeed). At any rate '05, we have lived up to and surpassed the greatness that defines each class' senior year. '05 has proven to be hotter, faster, and smarter in all realms of PA life. Vini, vidi, vici!

1. Jonathan Dent and Thameka Thompson '05 2. Daniel Hackney, Helen Chacon, Ciarra Schmidt and Clarissa Deng, all of '05. 3. Marc Asch '05 enjoys his seniority. 4. Lovely '05 ladies Sam Lederfine Paskal, Anne Sharp and Emy Gelb. 5. Senior Catalina McCallum gets a lift from Will Riordan. 6. OH FIVE!!!

Reigning Class

Senior Year

written by Anthony-James Green, Nathan Scott and W. Christian Vareika

Few four-year seniors can forget their first day at Andover. The disaster of September 11, 2001, our first day of classes, marked a strange and somewhat bittersweet start to our Andover careers. However, that first day caused our class to quickly come together as we helped each other through the struggle and built up a strong unity that would come to define our four years here. And united we have been...perhaps to a fault. The class of 2005 has always been marked by our class pride: our loud, fierce, obnoxious pride. Two years ago, in his senior Potpourri essay, Vinny Feliciano '03, describing his graduating class, remarked, "Maybe we're not the loudest class, but who wants a bunch of unruly, loud, random screaming kids in their class. That's what '05 is for." We took that as a compliment. Even Mrs. Chase, our collective mother figure, came to detest us after our first All-School Meeting as seniors. But we remained steadfast, proud, and without regret. If you think that was bad, just wait for the spring.

The class of 2005 has never been the most athletic class. We were never the studs, and tri-varsity athletes are few and far between. We were always the scrappy kids, the underdogs, excelling in intramural athletics – school sponsored or not (big ups to meatstiK and snow football). We excelled in theater and music, got 1600s on our SATs, and cried a lot. We've gone through a lot as a class. We were the last class to see the burning of the "A." As juniors, we saw the now rare feat of our football team thrashing Exeter 42-17, then rushing the field in the Exeter stadium, our tiny, vulnerable bodies in danger of being trampled by the swarming crowd and Zack DeOssie '03 – equal threats, as far as we were concerned. We watched the destruction of Evans with awe, and the rise of Gelb with considerably less awe. We watched as all of our study abroad programs were taken away after the school invested its entire endowment in Hot Pockets, Martha Stewart Living, the Segway, and a racehorse named Nervous Nellie. We watched as a few – well, let's be honest, a lot – of our friends left the school. We went through all of it with unfettered spirit and an intense urge to play MeatstiK and scream at really inopportune times. We were the Class of 2005, and nothing could – or will – stop us.

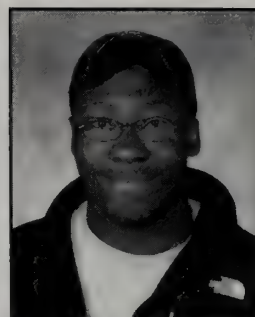

So here we are, seniors at Andover. Maybe underclassmen girls aren't as impressed as you'd hoped, and you're disappointed because you always thought that this year you'd be getting more tail than a fur trapper. We run the clubs, we lead the athletic teams (for the most part, damn upper captains), and we rule the school. The Red Sox are in the World Series and life is good. Pretty soon we'll be heading off into our own individual lives, and we'll be back at the bottom of the totem pole. So enjoy your time now, '05, because this is our year, and we won't ever get it back (unless you PG, Matt Fram '04 style). And remember, if at any time in your life someone asks you a question which you can't begin to answer legitimately, you always have an easy out: "Um.....'05?"

Lasting Impressions

These seniors will never be forgotten.

The Class of 2005 as a whole will forever be remembered as the class that screamed the loudest during ASM and shocked the school with spirit that the administration hadn't seen in years. However, there are certain members of '05 that will be remembered for their quirky traits and unique talent. People such as Greg Feldmann, whose dashing smile charms faculty and students alike all across campus, or people like Kelly Stecker, whose picture has graced the sports pages of the Phillipian countless times. The senior class may be full of notable seniors with awesome hair or a stunning smile, but most memorably, '05 is a class that knows what it's good at.

SeniorPride

The seniors not only have school pride, but also... '05!!

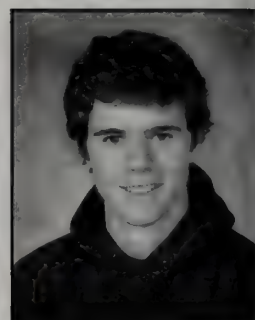

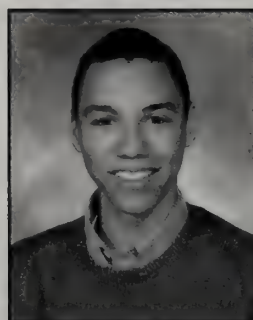

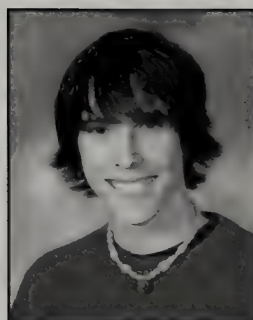

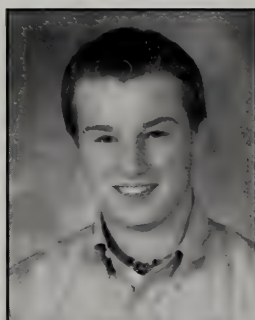

"When I say blue you say white! Blue! White! Blue! White!!!" At Andover, we have more spirit than any other school in New England. Encouraged by our fabulous Blue Keys, we cheer loudest, longest and hardest. Even when the going gets rough, and we might be losing a football game 44 - 0, we still keep on our game face, grit our weathered teeth and yell for all we're worth. Even within the school, every class is immensely proud of themselves. The seniors of Andover may have the most spirit PA has seen in recent times. School opened this year with a controversy over the loud (and "disrespectful") seniors screaming during the first All-School Meeting. The overpoering screaming solidified the theory that '05 is the class with the most spirit. Even during orientation, Blue Keys were walking around campus with no voice, having screamed themselves out while rallying the new kids. Throughout the years, the class of '05 has proven that it can undoubtedly drown out the rest of the school with, "We've got MORE!"

1. CC Donahue and Anthony Green '05 are ready to intimidate the Exies. 2. Senior decked out at Andover-Exeter. 3. Varsity football managers Lisette Duran '05, Akosua Miller '05 and Thameka Thompson '05 support their favorite team.

Facing Reality

Time flies when you're at Andover.

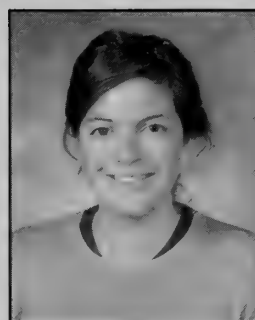

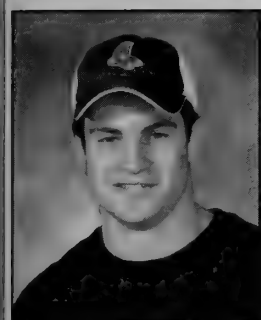

The Gelb is up and fully running, but some of us still slip up and call it Evans. The old science building has now been reduced to a grassy knoll, and the space looks strangely empty. The Washington Intern Program is a thing of the past, and School Term Abroad is unheard of. The seniors have had many harsh realities to face throughout their years; the most stunning one of all is suddenly discovering that you're at the top of the tier and are the oldest of the entire student body. Time is a strange element in Andover life. So much seems to happen, and yet the hours and days fly by. From the matriculation ceremony to the commencement ceremony, people change and suddenly your next step is being an Andover alum.

Embarrassing Moments

Seniors strut their stuff with confidence.

Seniors, at the top of the Andover food chain, feel as if they're socially invincible. No matter how lame or goofy they may act, they'll always be the oldest, biggest, most experienced, and closest to graduation and freedom. As a result of this unbreakable social status, many take a little too much liberty with their social freedom. Often times, seniors walk headfirst into embarrassing and awkward moments. Whether it happens at a dance - strutting their stuff beyond their limits and tripping before everyone in class - knowing everything but getting nothing right on the field - running like a blue-painted madman in front of everyone only to lose it in the mud, or in the halls - dancing and singing oblivious to any spectators, seniors tend to embarrass themselves. Seniors are so often unworried about their image that their personalities make them that much cooler.

Fall Stress

Senior Fall is the epitome of pressure at Andover.

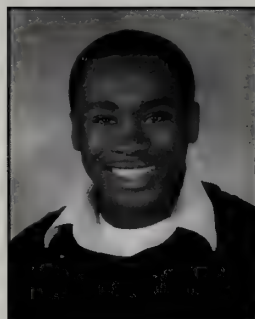

The fall term begins with the exhilaration and excitement of a new year, but as classes begin and college counseling settles in for the long haul, the thrill dulls and the infamous senior fall hits the reigning class of Andover. The pressure is turned way up for seniors in the fall because it is their very last chance to make an impression on colleges. Grades need to be higher than ever, standardized tests need to be taken nearly every week, and college applications need to be completed (or... at least started). Some of '05 pull all-nighters for days at a time, and some succeed to make senior year the most productive term of all. All the seniors juggle the college necessities and leadership responsibilities, but we still manage to shout out spirit the loudest at football games.

Free Ride

Day students with cars
provide comfort and ease

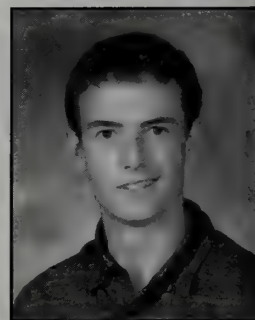

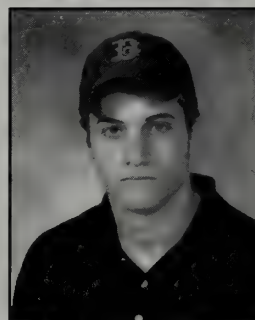

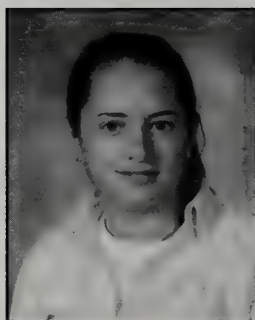

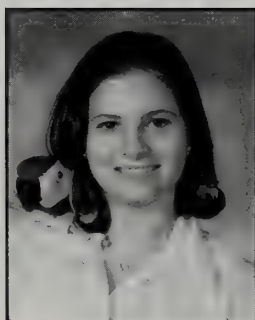

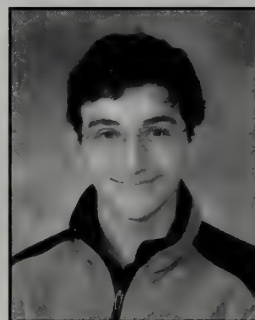

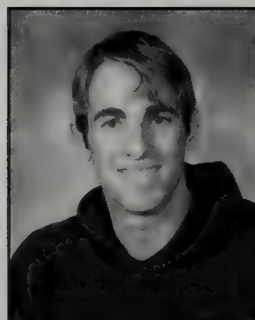

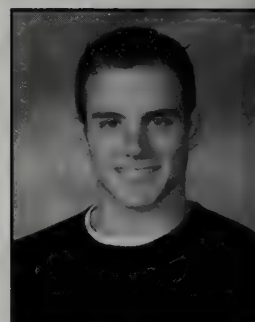

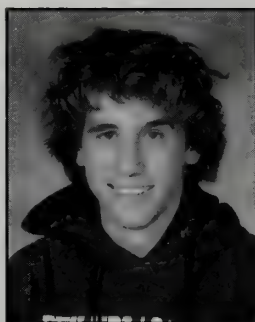

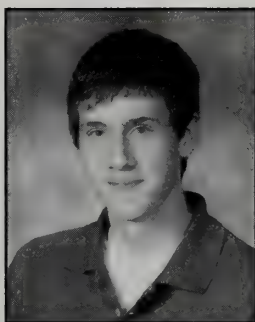

Sometimes day students are thought of as not being able to get the full experience of being at boarding school, but hey, they have the privilege of being able to drive cars. Cassie Tognoni '05 says about her Royal Blue BMW X5, "It's the love of my life. Sometimes when I'm really stressed out, I just take it out on the highway." Day Students not only use their cars for mere transportation and stress relief; they also use them for social functions. Many day students take their friends downtown, to North Andover or other destinations. Meng Tan '05 explains, "I really don't like giving boarding students rides because I feel like they're using me." But, one of the greatest privileges of being a senior is having day student friends with their own cars.

All Four

The four-year seniors share a bond.

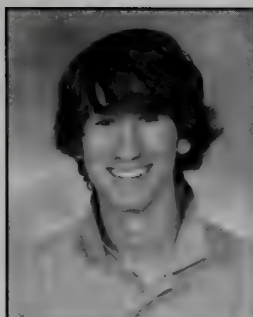

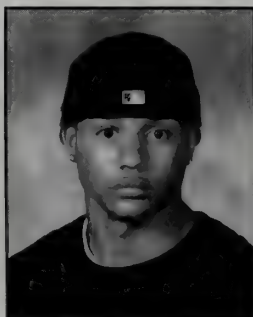

Four years is a long time to stay anywhere, much less the bubble of Andover. Those of us who have sustained through all four years of high school here at Andover know every nook and cranny of the school and also know the many changes that this place has undergone. We know Andover like no other students on campus, and the place has become like a second home for most of us. The excitement of arriving for the first day of freshman year is paralleled with the enthusiasm that the beginning of senior year brings out of all of us. We've seen people come and go, as well as buildings move and fall. The freshman year midnight run will be remembered forever, and the privilege of shouting "FOUR YEARS" at the top of our lungs is like no other.

The Year

How do you measure a year?

At graduation, looking back on senior year, most students feel the year should be divided into two distinct phases: the fall and early winter (the most stressful period of students' lives), and the year from then on. After working tirelessly through college applications, club boards, varsity sports, advanced classes, college exams, and a frostbitten winter, students take a different approach to the spring. Instead of SATs, students suffer through nights of Ryley Room pizza. Instead of six courses, they now manage only four. The fall, which creaks by, seems to take years in comparison to the lighting-fast, warm-weathered, carefree spring. Senior year, with its two complete and different phases, is a challenging yet exciting time. The final year at PA is a precariously balanced combination of serious moments and wild times. From late nights hanging with friends, to sleepless nights of work, senior year is the one year no one wants to miss.

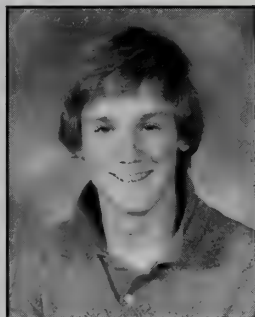

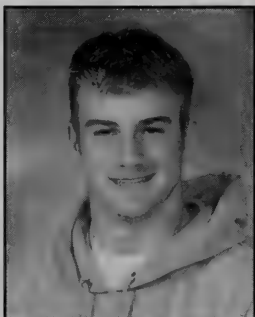

"Even though Senior Fall is horrible, I know that Senior year as a whole will be awesome. Friends are closer than ever and we're on top of the school. I can't wait until Senior Spring." - Sarah Hong '05

Haunted Passion

A different Halloween

Halloween is often overlooked at PA. Fall term is in full swing and there is hardly enough time to create a costume. Trick-or-treating seems out of question. But who knew that this holiday could spark the interest and talent of an Andover scholar? In the weeks leading up to Halloween, gifted senior Will Allen turned the average Benner House into the "Macabre Manor," an original and highly thrilling haunted house. Allen combined devilish acting, outstanding effects, and supernatural scenery to create an unbelievable show. "It was really amazing. I thought it wouldn't be very good, but the place was spooky and the vampires were excellent actors," exclaimed one excited Upper. In previous years, Allen had designed haunted houses for Fuess, but his efforts this year gave made the haunted house an exciting option besides the ever-popular Halloween Dance.

Beyond Andover

After PA...

As senior year continues to fly by and Commencement draws closer and closer, everyone thinks about what it will be like to finally leave the Andover bubble. We will soon be hit in the face with the REAL real world. College applications will be sent in, acceptance (and rejection) letters will be received, and decisions need to be made. The seniors are confronted with the fact that the future of their lives is in their hands. What will happen after Andover?

After college? What will everyone look like at our first reunion? Will shouts of "05!" still ring across the great lawn? Or will we all be old and "serious" with bald spots and heavy legs? The future is truly imminent, and the "What are you going to do with your life" lectures from our parents are starting to have a ring of relevancy. All we know now is that Commencement will be an event of triumphant laughter mixed with earnest tears.

Ever Confident

Upper Year

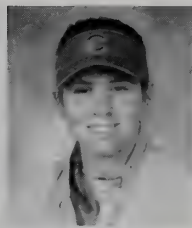

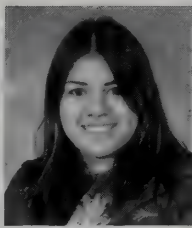

written by Gabe Worgaftik '06

It's difficult to describe all that is the Class of 2006 within the confines of 200 or so words. Maybe the best way to do so would be with an analogy, like those found on the SAT, except of course that we don't have analogies on our SATs. We're just better that way. Regardless, in a lot of ways one could compare '06 to Sobida the sandwich maker, but here you won't. Sorry. Instead, I think the best way to describe '06 is via way of the Muffalata, each ingredient representing some part of our great class. For example, the varsity athletes are the ham, honey-roasted to perfection. The political pundits stirring up support during the fall presidential elections are the hard salami, a tasty sandwich meat by any measure. There are dozens more examples I could wax poetic about, but I think you get the point - the Class of 2006 is every bit as tasty and filling (metaphorically speaking) as the sandwich that the Muffalata is literally. So what lies ahead for the Class of '06? More confusing facial hair from the day student locker crowd? One can only hope. Spencer Johnson working his magic on the Class of 2009? God willing. A fantastic senior year? Indubitably.

Finally... Sleep

Uppers work until they drop.

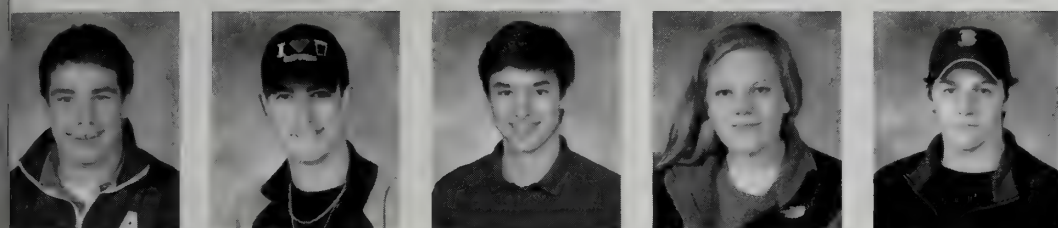

Upper year at PA is incessantly strenuous and demanding. For naïve juniors and lowers, the work load looms over them like a storm cloud. Upper year is a rite of passage: the History 300 term paper, not sleeping for days, physics labs and Hamlet essays - it's all part of the Andover experience. The College Board tests and AP's in the spring only add to the stress. Upper year can teach even the least resourceful to run on nothing. Sleep is something that all uppers learn to treasure. As current upper Amy Prosper '06 so eloquently put it: "I slept nine hours last night, and I was like 'Yes! I'm all rested for the week!'" But then, as the incoming seniors come steaming into the chapel every fall, I think everyone realizes...it will be worth it.

Uppers captain the majority of Varsity teams

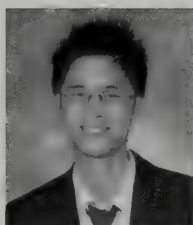

Ever since '06 were freshmen, it was obvious that they were and would be the athletic leaders of Phillips Academy. Even then they dominated the varsity teams in all seasons. It was remarkable how many freshmen made varsity teams, and not only made the teams but contributed immensely to their success. When lower year came around, and then upper year, many more athletes joined the squads to strengthen the teams even more. "The diversity and depth of the athletic talent in the '06 class is truly astounding.

From soccer boys to swimming girls, we have a range of athletic capacities that keep the Andover tradition of success and team spirit alive. The several uppers already elected team captains proves the leadership and talent among the class of '06 that will continue to lead Andover athletics to victory in these next couple of years," remarks Katie Faulkner '06. Hunter Thunell '06 feels that "admissions did an awesome job of accepting amazing athletes for '06."

Real Deal

and there's still Senior Fall...

Upper year. You've heard all the horror stories, but what really makes upper year so bad? Some blame the tough classes (no more PE suckers,) while others blame standardized testing and the intense college process. Whatever the cause, Uppers get maximum work and minimal sleep. With the renowned History 300 paper and the horror of standardized tests, Uppers are free from the shackles of underclassmen but also face the looming task of college prep. No longer time having for socializing, uppers spend conference periods finishing physics labs, and Friday nights combing through SAT books. The class of 2006 anticipates the infamous spring term of next year with hope and enthusiasm, while reminiscing on the glorious days of lower year.

Weekend Life

The "night scene" at Andover.

Uppers are probably the ones who look forward to weekends the most, but every class in the student body works diligently during the week and collectively breathes a sigh of relief when Friday rolls around. "The weekends are a good time for us to rest and take a break from all our work and stress of the week," explains Merit Webster '06. During the weekends, people go to the dances, hang out in the greasy-smelling but always packed Ryley Room, curl up in common rooms all over campus and watch movies rented from the library, or go to the various performances staged on campus. "I usually try to find other activities to do on campus on the weekends, but almost always I end up back in Ryley. It might seem repetitive, but it's a great place to hang out with your friends," says Owen Remeika '06.

W<sub>e</sub>Tingle

Lower-middler Year

written by Billy Draper '07

Every class currently at Phillips Academy is known for expertise in one area or another. The Class of 2006 is known for being extremely athletic, the class of 2008 is too new to have developed an expertise (but I am confident that they soon will), and...well, the Class of 2005...exists. 2007 is an exception. It has no single defining characteristic. We have the jocks, the geniuses, the insanely attractive guys (namely me), the sane people, the crazy people, the comedians, the punks, the pranksters, the Crips, the Bloods, the Sox fans, the Yankees fans, and the list goes on. All of these different people come together to form one super class, the PA Class of 2007. All right, so maybe I'm being biased because I am a member of the Class of 2007...but I'm only stating the facts. When we become seniors, I am sure we will all enthusiastically hold our hands up high chanting "07" and when we graduate, I am confident we will all become leaders in our own right. I love this class, it makes me tingle all over.

Feeling Important

One year makes a big difference.

Lowers are a mere twelve months older than the juniors, but they feel infinitely more superior than their freshman counterparts. "Just the name 'junior' makes them far inferior to us. Lowers have a lot more experience and knowledge about how things work at Phillips Academy, so juniors who think they know everything about boarding school are in for quite a surprise," explains Rush

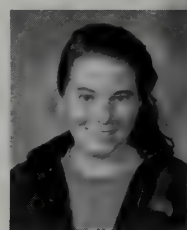

Martin '07. Junior year is a new experience for everyone, and the difference between what lowers know about campus and how bewildered the Juniors are is huge. "Lower year so far has made me feel that I have more responsibilities because as lowers we do not have lights out anymore, and we have '08 looking up to us as their role models," said Tasha Keeney '07.

Making Habits

Lowers let go of lights out.

Lower year is considered the least stressful of the four. While juniors struggle to adapt, lowers already know the ropes. In their last year before college pressures, lowers often audition for plays, try out for teams, or dabble in new subjects. In upperclass dorms, they stay up late, have more fun, and make friends with older classmates. Studying isn't closely proctored, and time management hasn't been perfected yet, so everyone struggles to establish good habits. Some try to get to sleep every night by 10 p.m., while others can't manage to sleep at all. Their ability to have fun and get work done indicates how well they'll cope in the years to come.

Chilling Out

Lowerers have time to just hang out.

Now that junior year is over the lowers have new privileges, more responsibilities, and know the scoop on the social scene. Junior year everyone had to have their lights out at 11:00 pm and go to bed, but now that it's 'lower year, such restraints are gone. Curtis Holden '07 thinks that "lights-out was a hassle and now without it I have a lot more time to do my work and chill." The lowers have a much more rigorous schedule due to the lower program, so dealing with the heightened workload was yet another change from junior year. Ali Zindman '07 insists that "if you manage your time properly, then the work is not too burdensome." Above all, the best part of lower year is the amount of free time compared with the lackthereof in other years at Phillips Academy. Although the library is a place of study, many lowers use it as a social hangout. As Claire Voegelé '07 declares, "the lowers finally own the Freeman Room now that '04 is gone!"

New Comers

New lowers are welcomed onto campus.

Settling into an existing class is extremely challenging. As a new lower, you join already formed groups, fight for your place on sports teams, move into upperclass dorms, and often live in the worst housing. Despite these challenges, most fit right into the community. They provide a needed boost to existing teams, a new element to groups of friends, and shed some light on the world outside the "Andover bubble." Regardless of their reasons for coming, new lowers inject new life into their class. By graduation, the lines between new and rising lowers are long forgotten.

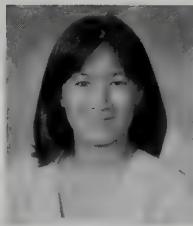

1. New lowers Howie Kalter '07 and Alex Schwartz '07 show some love at Quad Day. 2. New lowers Carolyn Pollard and Stacy Middlebrook enjoy their first Quad Day. 3. Roommates and new lowers Olivia Coffey and Sarah Dewey are inseparable.

Dating Novices

Love across the classes is nothing new...

Just like everywhere else in the world, though it may not be apparent to the untrained eye, there is romance on the Andover campus. Even the juniors and lowers know how to get their mack on with upperclassmen, and the older set love it. Charlie Frentz, Ben Levenback and Daniel Bacon, all '06 are all major playas, and are avid supporters of this kind of lovin': "We enjoy underclassmen because they are often naïve and ignorant to our wily ways." And if that's not sketchy enough, these boys are all on the debate team! Not only is the upper class drawn to the underclassmen, but for some reason, the lower girls just can't resist those senior guys.

Thinking Big

Lowers define their individual ambitions.

Lower year tends to be a time of change at PA. Not only does the class dynamic change due to all the new lowers, but individuals break out of that freshmen pack they once found security in. Lowers get to live with upperclassmen in the dorms, and they begin to take interest in various campus activities. Athlete Catherine Wright '06 said that she had always loved soccer, and her affinity for the sport deepened when she had the honor of making the varsity team her lower year. Phillipian editors-to-be often begin spending their Monday nights in the Phillipian room as lowers, and maybe even that conniving presidential hopeful has begun planning the campaign of a lifetime. Aspiring musicians and talented thespians discover their passions and devote their time and energy to doing the things they love. The days of exploration days freshman year have passed as lowers discover their true callings at Andover.

Left Alone

written by Chip Schroeder '08

As we came down from the chapel steps to go to the Quads, my brother left me. It was our first day at Andover and we were alone. The parents were gone, and we looked around to meet people and find some friends. By the next day, there were already little cliques. We had the Hale girls, Isham girls, A House and Pease House guys, and most prominently, of course, were the Rockwell guys who were almost as intimidating as the day student girls from Pike.

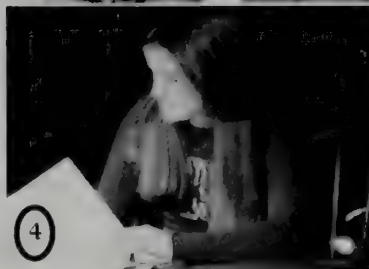

I have one word for orientation - lovely. I had an absolute blast seeing those magnificent learning environments for about 10 hours straight and playing ice breaker games, which the Blue Keys were really getting into. Since our class is ridiculously outgoing, we had a bundle of fun at the Thinkfast game, memorable for its sing-off, where a certain brave guy with stunning blonde hair sang a certain Backstreet Boys song and was robbed of his victory. (Ahem..)

By the first week of classes, our class' true colors came out. We were characterized by about a dozen varsity athletes, approximately 200 who joined community service, and one extraordinary Hawaiian mathematician.

In the words of Matt Cranney, "Peace out, go Bosox, and word to your mother."

1. Junior girls enjoy the snow. 2. Someone '08 and Lisa Lian '08 show their school spirit.. 3. Random girl studying. . 4. Freshman enjoy weekend life.

First Time

Everything at PA is new to the juniors.

Junior year is an overwhelming experience. At only fourteen, juniors encounter everything for the first time. What older students find old or boring is intriguing and challenging to the freshmen. The first walk into town, football game, cluster final, embarrassing moment, club rally, Borden dance, and Ryley Room night are all new and exciting. Junior year is also composed of first classes where the teacher expects you to speak out in every period, first blue book tests, first disappointing midterms, first restriction, and many other things. The dorm is also something that no freshman has experienced before. The reprimanding prefects, lights out, 8:00 sign in, no parents, and friends everywhere are just a few of the things that juniors need to adjust to at Andover. The excitement of being a junior is something that no student ever forgets.

Pack Living

Juniors just can't let go of their friends.

The start of a new year at Andover can perennially be recognized by the packs of juniors roaming around the school like prides of lions. Everywhere they go, they go together. Favorite hang-outs include the Freeman Room in the library, Lower Right in Commons, and the GW lobby/lounge. The advantage of this "pack-living" is that any insecurity imaginable will be hidden in a mess of their 20 closest friends with their 20 L.L. Bean backpacks stuffed with biology text books and notes about the Mongols. Despite relative anonymity, there are still the alpha-males and the stragglers to serve as evidence of the complicated social hierarchy that junior year perpetually provides. And then, as the winter snow melts, many cliques dissolve and these once vulnerable juniors might even make the trek to dinner alone. Or maybe not quite yet...

1. Junior boys enjoy a knoll dance. 2. Junior girls spend some quality time together. 3. Hale girls get super excited and primped up before their first Sadie.

Loving Commons

Food for thought

Most juniors love Commons, and the food maintains its appeal to Andover's newest class. They flock to Commons to see friends and enjoy its "eat anything" policy, resulting in the feared "freshman fifteen." They love eating when they want, with whom they want, and what they want. While older students migrate upstairs for a quiet place to study, the junior class packs into lower right, hangs out late, and crowds too many people around too few tables. Intimidated by upperclassmen, nobody wants to eat alone or miss socializing. Commons food itself, still new and interesting, tastes best junior year and grows bland quickly, but most pay little attention to the food they're eating while hanging out in the campus social center.

New Places

Juniors step outside their comfort levels at PA.

Junior year is a tender year for most students who enroll at Phillips Academy. Each student enters the world of high school and is away from his or her parents and friends for months for the first time. They spent all summer eagerly anticipating the new experiences and people the future held for them. Chip Schroeder '08 explained that "it was really easy to adjust to living away from home because living with your friends is kind of like a party all the time." Juniors come to campus full of apprehension, wondering how they will be treated, as the youngest members of the school. Knowing that a friendly atmosphere makes everything easier, Juniors hoped the people around them would be easy to get along with. Cassidy Carpenter '08 says, "I haven't gotten homesick yet and everyone has been so welcoming, so the transition has been very smooth."

F following F footsteps

Older siblings help younger ones adjust.

Many students come to Andover following the footsteps of their older siblings. Older siblings set the scene and test the water for their younger counterparts. To our ancient and well-established school some families have sent their kids for four generations and counting. Older siblings make the transition from home life to dorm life easier by warning their siblings about that mean history teacher and advising on what math course to start out in. They can also help their brothers or sisters establish themselves, become known across campus, and make upperclass friends. Without a doubt, having an Andover-savvy older sib is undeniably advantageous.

1. Dan and Jon Adler pose in Commons. 2. Peter and Ian Accomando show off their skills in Ryley. 3. Katie and Will Hunckler show us their sibling love. 4. Libby and Kay Kay Hambleton share a hug. 5. Mike and Sarah Donelan pause in the library.

We're Family

by Paul Murphy

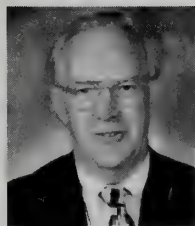

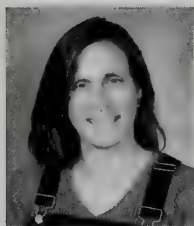

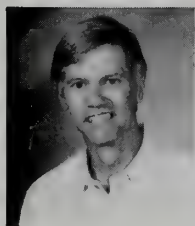

Flagstaff Cluster Dean, Math Teacher, Girls Varsity Swim Coach

If you think of Andover as one HUGE family, the faculty obviously plays the role of THE PARENTS. In fact, we do say that we act in loco parentis ("in place of parents" and not parentis loco...crazy parents!). This parallel runs true throughout most of what we do. As parents, we vary in how much leeway we give you. Some of us are the "tough love" kind of parents. Others of us more closely resemble your dear old aunt Mabel who loves everything you do, no matter what! Some of us are really like older siblings and others, more like grandparents. We are in your lives and you, in ours...at least for a brief time as you make your way through this very unique high school experience. We make decisions about your lives much the same way parents do and we can also be somewhat clueless about your likes, dislikes and entertainment choices.

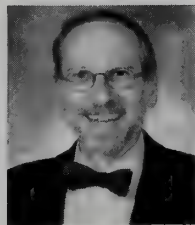

But in the end, we all care deeply about you and the people that you have become by the time you reach the end of this beginning of your lives. Whether you have been here one year or four, we have respected the work that you have been so willing to do, day in and day out, in order to strive for success here. At times, you have stumbled; and so have we. In the dark days of February and the bright sunshine of May, though, we have inspired each other to persevere. Commencement, or as we call it here, "Exhibition," marks a moment in the lives of both the seniors and the faculty. You take justifiable pride in making it to this day, and we take pride in your achievements as well. You have done the work, but we have been there for you all along: teaching you in the classroom, in the dorms, in extracurricular activities and on the many fields of play that Andover embodies.

This is a very special place. We will stay behind while you will leave the nest and use the many talents that you have to make the world just a little bit better. And we will welcome a new group in your place. But you will always be welcome back here...like coming home.

TEACHERS AND STUDENTS

By Yusuke Uchiyama '05

Much has changed since the beginning days of Andover. Although distinct changes occurred during the history of our school, the underlying force that separates Andover from the rest stays the same. The academic environment teaches us to treat education as a life-long journey. Class discussions find their way into evening conversations and, over time, we all learn to fly with our newly developed intellectual wings. The soul of this academic community lies in the library. Fortresses made of textbooks and encyclopedias protect the soldiers who venture there at night, and the librarians, sworn guardians of this academic world, watch over the tired with helping hands. Andover is a community characterized by the relationships we build with each other. Through the melancholy musings of T.S. Elliot, the inspirational speeches of Winslow Homer and the spiritual integrity of George Washington we can find our own passions and ambitions. The founding fathers of our school read the same works and learned from the same leaders years ago, albeit in a much different atmosphere. We study and learn in new buildings adorned with tools unimaginable to Samuel Phillips, but Andover still fosters an environment of intellectual freedom incomparable to any other place. We enter classrooms and watch outstanding faculty paint a colorful world. They not only teach the formula for cellular respiration or the significance of Shakespeare's soliloquies, but also help us find our own potential. Instructors here are willing to help distressed students at ten in the evening because they love the subjects they teach and enjoy watching each student mature. At times, we all wish to step out of the academic cycle, perhaps to rest our weary minds and allow our bodies to fuel themselves on something other than caffeine and pizza. However, senior year has makes it clear that Andover students gracefully embrace these hardships. We now appreciate our struggles. Senior year is the culmination of a difficult journey, one that involves mentors and friends to help us along the way. As Andover students, we are ready for the rigorous and rewarding journey we call life. Through our years here, we have all sacrificed something, but we've learned more about ourselves than we ever thought we could when we first arrived.

MY TEACHER, MY FRIEND

Students and teachers alike cherish their close friendships.

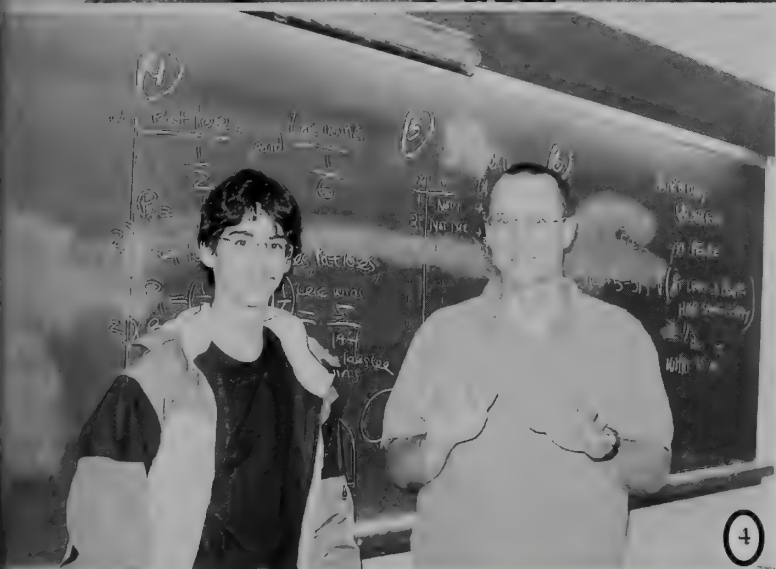

Some of PA students' the most treasured memories don't involve their peers. Rather, we remember fond moments with teachers who instructed and inspired us. Whether in the classroom, on the playing field, or in the dorm, student-faculty bonds begin to develop the instant we matriculate. In a time of change and uncertainty for adolescents, teachers give a shoulder to lean on, an ear to fill, and a motivational force that drives us all to succeed. This page is too small to give full justice to the innumerable friendships that are made at this school. Our only hope is that it can serve as a thank you note to every Andover teacher. It is a dedication to all the teachers who first brought a student out of his or her shell, a dedication to the coaches who pushed their players and helped them achieve their absolute best, a dedication to the house counselors who stayed up long into the night to chat with students - for it is in these teachers that the true spirit of Andover is found. It is because of these admirable individuals that each member of our community is able to blossom and shine so brilliantly.

1. Mrs. Huang shows Rebecca Howe '06 and her new digital camera. 2. Dr. Cernota and Mgbechi Erundu '06 discuss a difficult chemistry problem. 3. # WHERE WE STUDY

PA students are famous for finding the most unique places and times to do work.

Ah, studying - a task an Andover student is all too familiar with. Whether working under the all-seeing eyes of Mr. Sprattler, in a forgotten corner of Graves, or at one of our many study halls, where we study is an important part of our lives. Due to the fact that academic preparation consumes much of our lives, it is common knowledge that places of study are campus hot-spots between 8-10 p.m. We forever struggle to maintain the balance between our work and our social life at PA, and we pick study areas accordingly. It is well known that if you absolutely do not want to get anything done, "studying" in the library is the best option. There, you can observe nightly face-offs between librarians and students, do laps around the library, and even get away with dance parties in the elevators. If music is your great love, there is always the trek out to Graves where sweet melodies streaming from the surrounding practice rooms serenade the studying students. The PACC, with its soothing hum of computers, churning of printers, and constant tap-tap-tapping of computer keys is also highly popular. No matter what your homework habits, there is a place for you. From freshmen who just want to meet someone, ANYONE, to the lowers with their piles upon piles of, well, nothing to do, to the uppers enjoying their exploration of American history and all-nighters, and finally to the seniors who have become experts/machines at balancing homework and college applications, everyone at PA finds that certain special place that meets all their studying needs.

ALL ABOARD!

School Year Abroad remains an ever-popular alternative to the infamous Upper Year.

Each year, most Phillips Academy Students decide to return to their regular academic routine in the familiar setting of Andover, Massachusetts. Other, more ambitious, souls looking for a change, a memorable life experience, and an eye-opening cultural exchange choose to sample the school's offerings abroad. Last year, five students decided to attend school year abroad to travel, try new things and develop their foreign language skills. Jill Ozzie '05 and Martha Vega-Gonzalez '05 traveled to Brittany, France, where they lived with French families, ate cheese and pate, and made European friends in the spirit of international amnesty. Shani Small '05 journeyed to Spain, where she soaked up all the sites and sounds she could. Erin Coleman and Ned Henningsen, both '05 Latin scholars, went to Italy. There they learned Italian, made pizza, and shopped to their hearts' content. Each participant came back saying the same thing: "Boy, you guys sure missed out!" Obviously, this singular opportunity is one they'd recommend to any PA-weary peer looking for an adventure.

THE FUTURE OF COMMONS

As plans progress to renovate Commons, students consider what would make their ideal eating haven.

There is no greater symbol of our Andover unity than Commons. In this dining hall the entire community - faculty, staff, and students - gathers for meals. Naturally, when it came time to renovate this ancient institution, there was no lack of opinion on the matter. Should the new tables be round or rectangular? Should the floors be tile or carpet? Should there be a comprehensive food-court, including McDonald's, Sbarro's and Panda Express? In the fall term, Flagstaff Cluster Dean Paul Murphy and School President Daniel Adler administered a campus-wide Commons Renovation Survey. The survey tried to gauge exactly what students and faculty would most appreciate in a new and improved Commons. While the most significant improvement will be updating the kitchen, many other changes could directly affect the atmosphere and mood of the dining halls. The size of tables has been a subject of much debate.

As any freshman can tell you, the tables in Commons are certainly too small to accommodate the requisite nine people. The lighting is also a hotly contested issue. While some of the more 'new-age' students would prefer a well-lit dining area, an equally vocal group prefers the slightly romantic low-level lighting. Only time will tell what exact changes will be made, but no matter what is modified, nothing can touch the wonderful spirit of Commons.

TALKING THE TALK

Foreign languages on Academy Hill

Whether listening to the thrilling conclusion to season 1 of Destinos or translating the opening passage of Virgil's Aeneid, PA students take full advantage of the opportunities provided by the Department of World Languages. In Samuel Phillips Hall, students eagerly gather to speak, hear and write the languages of the world. In-class instruction is supplemented by sessions in the Language Learning Center, where students can watch soap operas and movies in their chosen language of study. After completing the required introductory grammar classes, most students move on to advanced courses in French, Spanish, German, Russian, Japanese or Chinese. Through literature, video, and even music, gifted instructors open the minds of their students to different cultures and traditions, at the same time helping them achieve fluency. Nearby, in Pearson Hall, students explore the ancient worlds of Rome and Greece. From Ecce Romani, the introductory text, to advanced Catullan love poems and Socratic dialogues, students gain an appreciation of the ancient thought process as well as an understanding of the basis for many modern languages. Regardless of what language a student chooses, they're in for a real treat, as PA opens all the windows to different worlds.

APPRECIATING THE ADDISON

Absorbing images abound in the Addison Art Gallery

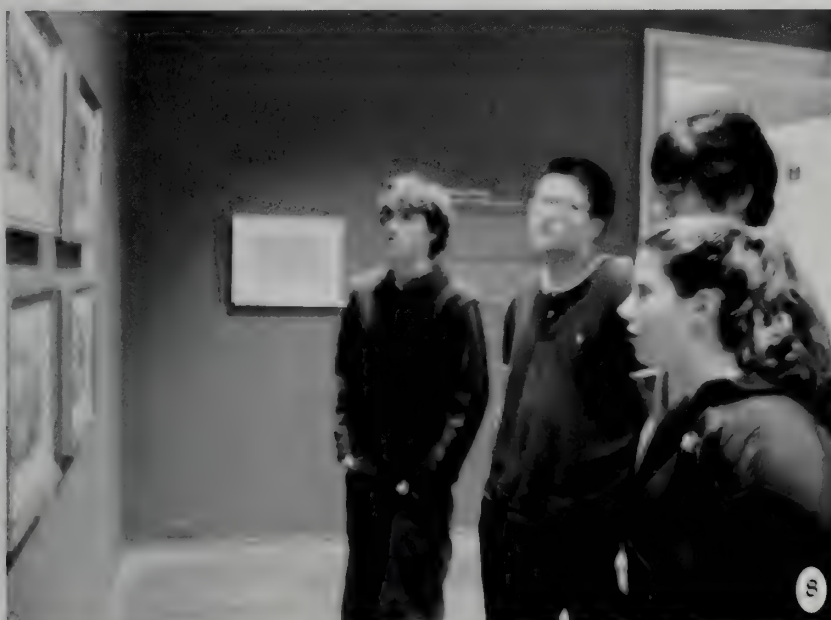

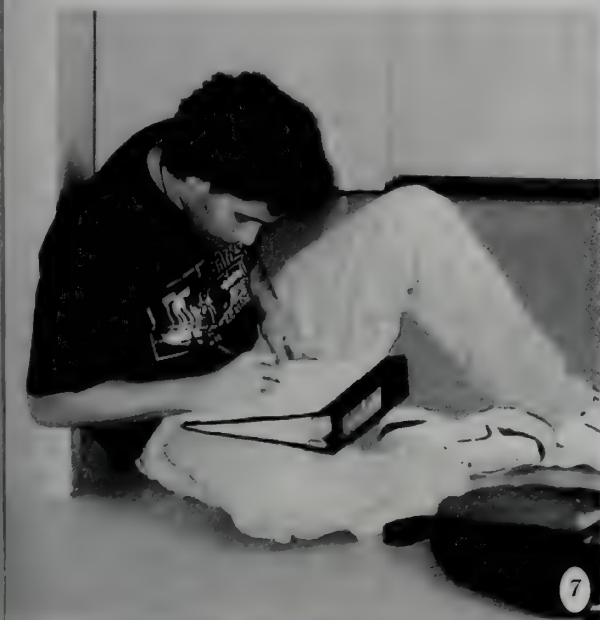

The Addison Art Gallery serves as an educational and intellectual resource for the Andover Art Club, a multitude of community service after-school projects, and History and English classes. It is also open to the general public, and is widely respected for its collection of 18th century art.

Every term there is a new exhibition, and this fall and winter the Addison focused on abstract artists. In the fall painter Terry Winters took a scientific approach to the world of abstract art. Spanning the second floor showroom, grand paintings left viewers in awe. In the winter, painter Alexis Rockman showcased her view of life in the future with a painting called "Brooklyn in 5000."

There was also an exhibit of 10 international women artists in a mixed media collaboration entitled "Girls Night Out." Not many colleges and certainly no other boarding schools can boast of such an impressive museum conveniently located right on campus. Lucky us!

BALLERINAS AND CHRISTMAS

The Nutcracker takes Andover by storm.

Staged annually in Tang Theatre, PA's production of The Nutcracker always ushers in holiday spirit. Every year, small children and adults alike enjoy the festivities, getting into Christmas spirit. Contagious cheer spreads quickly through campus thanks in no small part to our rendition of the classic ballet featuring our very own student talent. Students, faculty, family and friends get the chance to sit back, relax, and enjoy a holiday tradition.

W E'LL NEVER F ORGET

Honoring and remembering retiring faculty

Teachers are a huge part of what shapes our Andover experience, which makes it especially difficult to see faculty retire. Not only do they make the material we learn interesting, but they do a darn good job of making sure we understand it, too. Teachers such as Math teacher Nat Smith, Classics instructor Nicholas Kip, Associate Dean of Students Cilla Bonney-Smith, and Math teacher Cheng-yu Huang, all of whom are retiring this year, serve not only as educators but as mentors and friends. Andover teachers like these instructors are former engineers, scientists, and even undercover CIA agents who have saved the world 920,143,942 times who put all that aside in order to instruct and teach us. For this we are eternally grateful and can be satisfied knowing we learned from the best. Thank you, our retiring teachers; you will be missed.

"I was amazingly fortunate to have Mr. Smith, Mrs. Bonney-Smith, Mr. Kip and Mrs. Huang as teachers. Those experiences I can only describe as amazing. They each had such energy and dedication for every student. No one will ever be able to replace the pure joy with which they approached every class."

TAKING A BREAK

Andover students recharge with study breaks throughout the day.

Once in a while Andover students are able to emerge from the depths of the library basement, giving our brains a rest from the mind-numbing work we face every day. These study breaks might just be the only things that get us through those long nights of 100-page reading assignments or studying for those killer econ tests. Where do these study breaks take place? Whether it be five minutes spent chatting up a friend in the lobby of the library, watching the OC in Ryley, or just hanging out in the dorm, Andover students are quite adept at finding places and a times to socialize.

LET'S MAKE MUSIC

A look inside Graves Hall, the campus center for performing arts.

Andover has a hugely diverse range of music programs. For those who love to sing, PA has chorus, Cantata Choir, Fidelio Society and Gospel Choir. For instrumentalists, Andover offers choices such as orchestra and band. One of the most popular is the Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mr. Thomas. Every kind of musical performing troupe is included. There is Chamber Orchestra, Amadeus Ensemble, and the Corelli Ensemble. Many students prefer to play within a smaller group and take to the chamber music society to play in trios and quartets with fellow students and faculty members. The school also offers jazz ensembles, a concert band, handbell choir and a dozen student bands in which everyone is welcome. Needless to say, musical thought is alive and kicking within the PA community!

OHHH THOSE EXTRA-CURRICULARS

Andover's talented student body struts its stuff.

By Elissa Harwood

We came to Andover to be busy -- not just sort of busy, but superhumanly busy. We attended classes, played sports, studied, procrastinated, studied some more, and occasionally slept, but the real heart of the Andover experience was what we did in our 'spare' time.

This year's extra-curricular offerings were a mix of old and new. While the Phillipian staff continued to produce the oldest high school newspaper in the country, the "Frontline" board revived their relatively young political magazine, and the "Point/Counterpoint" crew created a totally new publication. WPAA continued to entertain PA students, and for the first time gave alumni a chance to catch the Andover-Exeter action with a live webcast of the big game.

The Philomathean Society and Model United Nations kept the debate hot on campus and brought the rhetorical heat to interscholastic competitions. Religious and cultural clubs expanded our horizons by planning weekend events, holding discussion groups, and hosting speakers. Community service clubs helped us venture outside the Andover bubble and make a difference in so many ways.

Theatre and dance troupes kept us constantly entertained with a plethora of unique productions, while Orchestra, Cantata, Fidelio and other musical ensembles delighted us with classical masterpieces and contemporary rhythms.

The spring term Theatre 520, "Things Fall Apart" journeyed to South Africa over the summer to perform. The newly renamed Abbot Cabaret was a huge hit with the whole campus.

This year, whether toiling in the basement of Morse, on stage in GW, or in the practice rooms of Graves, we worked through exhaustion and exhilaration to prepare for publications and performances, basked in the glow of jobs well done for about five minutes, then started our next issues and productions. After all, we can sleep when we graduate.

YOU GOT SERVED

Community Service brings people together..

At Andover we have redefined getting served. It no longer means getting schooled in a dance competition but instead hanging out with the cool people in your local community and helping to make the world a better place. This year more people participated in community service than ever before. The activities included everything from removing refrigerators and tires from the Spicket River in Lawrence and selling them on ebay to good old-fashioned pen pals. Ciarra Schmidt, co-head of Oxfam at Andover, remarked "Yeah, we've been really lucky this year. We made some serious bar to save, like, a billion people, and I only had to make cards with my face on a dog's body once. I think people were feeling really benevolent this year." Oxfam was the only organization that was feeling such great love. Many programs expanded because of the unexpected amount of students wishing to participate.

SPIRITUALITY FOR ALL

The Andover religious experience...

With the hectic pace of life on Academy Hill, religion and spirituality have the potential to fall by the wayside. Thanks, however, to the many campus spiritual and religious organizations, PA students are able to keep in touch with their traditions and faith. For many, far away from their homes and traditions, these clubs provide a welcomed gathering place to practice their religion amongst like-minded individuals. In Cochran Chapel, Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish representatives explain and teach their respective religions to ardent devotees and casual laity alike.

Many other clubs provide a place for observers of certain religions to congregate and share in a cultural experience away from home. Beyond actual practice and observance, the religious clubs stimulate discussion in the community about important issues facing religion today. From stem-cell research to Mideast peace, religious clubs are always willing to talk with members of the community with many different outlooks, opinions, and beliefs. The religious groups at Andover offer something for everyone.

An outlet for people with skills.

Going back to basically the dawn of time, man has itched for a way to express himself. Though it looked pretty grim at first, we generation X-ers got the good end of the lollipop if you know what I mean. They may have had their grunts and sticks, but we have the sweet succulent metaphorical sphere of publications. Yes, that's plural. On the political front, there is Frontline—a combination of informative facts and controversial opinions in sweet harmony. Then there is the Hue and Sable, a fine arts magazine that publishes drawings, paintings, and photographs; the Courant, Andover's literary magazine which publishes short stories and poetry; and Backtracks, Andover's oldest general interest magazine. In the Mix represents the cultural sector with diverse opinion pieces and perspectives. The Megaphone, the new kid on the block, is a glossy, fresh, and exciting guide to life at Andover. All in all, it seems there is really something for everyone, and those who don't like to write can read. Those who don't like to read can look at the pictures!

ANDOVER CULTURE REPRESENTED

Clubs celebrate diversity of culture on the Andover campus.

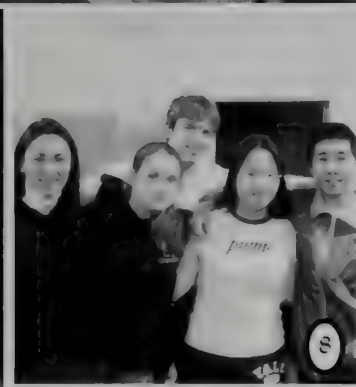

Ah, Andover's cultural clubs. They bring a little spice to the Andover bubble that we so desperately need. Not only can you immerse yourself in a different culture at least once a week but you can sample exotic treats (even if exotic means Depot Pizza from down by the train station -- it's still food.) But honestly, the culture clubs on campus give us a break from our fast-paced lives to enjoy a different language, food, and maybe even some brilliant foreign film. Last year, the German Club introduced us to Milka, German chocolate. It was some of the best chocolate the Andover campus has tasted as well as a welcomed extra supply of sugar. Andover's cultural clubs are also laid back -- no previous knowledge of the culture is required. All in all, the culture clubs are some of Andover's hidden gems.

GIANTS OF JOURNALISM

Keeping track of Andover's happenings

WPAA, Pot Pourri, and The Phillipian. The heart and soul of an Andover student's life. To start off, WPAA has entertained us over the years with a delightful blend of music and discussion from our peers. The radio shows always prove to be amusing because those in charge of the show are either truly comical or going to desperate measures to be. Either way, the radio shows ultimately lend themselves to gossip which is what truly keeps the Andover campus running. Then we have the Pot Pourri. Although sometimes quiet, it is always looming. It is a publication you always want to keep in the back of your mind because you remember your roommate is in possession of a valuable picture of you at 3 a.m. the night before the legendary history paper that will determine your life is due and you, expecting your world to end in a mere 5 hours, have lost all inhibitions and given in to the power of too much caffeine. In short, the Pot Pourri will immortalize you - whether it is in good light or not. Finally we have The Phillipian. While just the student newspaper to some, it can strike fear into the hearts of those who have seen the true Phillipian ways. Meeting deadlines against impossible odds and reporting on every facet of Andover life, Phillipian members have been known to get anywhere on this campus with the simple phrase - "I'm with the Phillipian." So whether it be a story on reforms in school rules or what movies are playing at the Loop, you can count on The Phillipian to report it.

EXPLORING YOUR GENDER

What makes men and women so different anyway?

Gender issues are interesting topics that exist on campus. Andover has various groups to deal with these issues, providing a time and place for interesting discussions to take place. Women's Forum meets every Wednesday, and the topics are advertised in creative, attention-grabbing ways all over campus. Topics discussed at Women's Forum are open to everyone and are far from the generic issues we have heard more than our fair share about. Andover also has a Gay/StraightAlliance. GSA sponsors various activities throughout the year such as the annual GSA dance, an entertaining time when students dress up in drag, and the best costume is awarded a prize, to taking the helm during National Coming out Day. It is these clubs that truly demonstrate Andover's welcoming of diversity and willingness to tackle difficult issues.

CULTIVATING POLITICAL INTEREST

Students activists take center stage.

This year at PA, the political scene was supercharged early in the fall term by the election duel between George W. Bush and John Kerry. Almost as soon as students arrived on campus, signs sprung up on billboards in GW and the library. Rivalries played out for all the campus to see, as the ads kept escalating in intensity. Eventually, the errant political advertisers were reigned in, and the campus battle subsided. In addition to these extreme political measures, voter registration drives were held on campus, and many students ventured to the nearby swing state of New Hampshire to rally support for their respective candidates. When election night finally rolled around, Republicans and Democrats alike were exhausted by the frenzied election season. On a more international and less partisan level, Oxfam again strived to abate world hunger. Students were asked to forego the gourmet Commons food for one night to raise money for the organization. The political clubs at Andover got students involved this year, whether it was putting up posters and enrolling voters or raising awareness for a grave world issue.

HEART AND SOUL

Blue Keys keep the spirit alive.

They pump us up. They bring out our school spirit. They scream and terrify new kids with their enthusiasm before taking them from their parents. They are the Blue Keys. Blue Keys are one of the most fundamental parts of this school. Everyone can remember their first day at school and the insane cheering that greeted them. Blue Keys not only take care of the new kids but also fully immerse them into Andover life and integrate them into the school. While for some, Blue Keys present so much school spirit they could puke, Blue Keys can stomach the endless hours of cheering, rescuing new kids that have fallen astray, and leading the new students out on that legendary night run. And all of this work does not even cover HALF of what Blue Key Heads do. Blue Key Heads keep our school activities running smoothly, cheer on our teams in the freezing cold, and stick through it all with high hopes until the very end. On spirit days you can be comforted knowing you will not be the only one dressed up yet know you will always be outshined by the Blue Keys Heads (remember: Blue Key Head of WQN Jean Marie Gossard '05 with head gear....IN her hair. Quite a nice touch). So sleep soundly knowing your Blue Key Heads are out there making sure there is plenty of fun to be had by all.

ANDOVER GOES GLOBAL

Model United Nations
students discuss and debate issues of global importance.

For anyone who's ever wanted to negotiate nuclear disarmament, resolve a crisis in the Balkans or requisition funding for AIDS in Africa, Model United Nations is the perfect club. Members were able to choose any of the world's nations and advocate that country's interests in a General Assembly, a World Bank, or even the Security Council. Representing nations as disparate as North Korea and Jamaica, students researched countries' policies and objectives in order to truly understand how their respective country would respond to any possible U.N. resolution. At the beginning of the year, the club focused on preparing for the Phillips Academy Model United Nations, our very own forum. The board members not only taught new recruits how to draft position papers and speak in front of an assembly, but also were charged with creating a focus for the upcoming Andover summit. After spending an entire Sunday debating and drafting resolutions, the group took home top honors for best delegation. In the winter term, the club sponsored its annual trip to D.C. to compete in the Georgetown Model United Nations. Once again the group took home many prizes for outstanding delegations and resolutions.

1. Delegates to the Georgetown Model United Nations see the sights in between conferences in the picturesque D.C. suburb. 2. Nate Pirakitikur '05 and the rest of the Model U.N. club rests on the plane ride back from Georgetown. 3. Yusuke Uchiyama '05 and Beau Freker '05 shake hands after distinguished performances at the Phillips Academy Model United Nations. 4. Stefanos Kasselakis '05, Fahad Missmar '06, and Lizzy Maxwell '05 find a little time to relax in between the busy Georgetown schedule. 5. Nick Smith Wang '05 smiles in the midst of an intense resolution debate.

SWEET SWEET MUSIC

Andover's music groups feed our souls.

Andover has a reputation for having a group of amazingly talented students. The music groups on campus have proven this to be true. These students have all stepped out of the academic arena to use their talents in music. From Fidelio, to the choir group, instrumental players, to the various bands on campus, Andover has a great variety of musical talent that can accommodate any Andover student. For these students, they often find themselves making the trek out to Graves or the Chapel for concerts, practice time, or merely to kick back and take their minds off studying with their music.

1. The Yorkies, Andover's finest all-male a cappella singing group prepare to serenade listeners with their lovely voices. 2. Juli Min's sweet yet powerful voice wooed audiences at performances this year. 3. Peter Mistretta tunes up his guitar and gets ready to jam with his band. 4. Women's Chorus, the auditorial astounding female vocal group, rehearses upstairs in Graves. 5. The Yorkies, arranged in order of pitch (highest voice at the bottom of the stairs, Andy St. Louis, '05) let the cameras get a good look at their manly physiques.

"It's a special experience to play and mingle with people your age who don't just play music, but are actual musicians."

- Paul Kim, '05, on Andover Orchestra

1. Instructor in English Craig Thorn a.k.a. DJ Stairmaster shows off his rich voice as well as his proficiency at stringing verse together. 2. Jason Duffett '05 feels the rhythm and lets loose with a furious array of cymbals and drums for his solo during Grasshopper Night. 3. The combination of Jon Weigel '05 singing, Nate Greenberg '05 on guitar and Andrew St. Louis '05 on the keyboard made for one awesome performance from this crew. 4. When Geoffrey Tsai '05 donned the pink feathered boa, he never thought it would be forever immortalized in the pages of the Pot Pourri. Pink neckwear and all, Geoffrey managed a stunning performance on his guitar. 5. New Organ Instructor Patrick Kabanda plays a beautiful piece during an All-School Meeting. 6. With Alex Malozemoff '05 on the flute, and Nate Greenberg '05 and Ben Lasman '06 on the guitar, this trio of buccanneers had audiences rolling in laughter. 7. CAMD Dean Bobby Edwards displays his vocal talent for everyone to hear.

"I've loved music at PA. You bond with everyone else in the ensemble. It's so great to be making music with your peers, and it's an amazing experience to communicate on a non-verbal level."

-Meta Weiss '05

EXPRESSION THROUGH ART

PA's talented visual artists craft masterpieces in many shapes and sizes-or they just watch them.

For any student who has ever needed an outlet for pent up creative energy, the clubs at Andover provide the perfect opportunity. For aspiring clay animators, Claymation Club gave a unique chance to gather with fellow artists and both to observe commercially produced examples of Claymation, and to produce some of their own. Students could gather together in Anime Club to observe some of the finest Anime films. In Crafts Club, students made bead necklaces, popsicle houses, and, as a fundraiser during Andover-Exeter, tie-dyed socks. The Andover Film Society met regularly in 1924 House to critique and evaluate a wide range of cinematographic genres. All in all, there was something for everyone in the wonderfully artistic world at Andover.

EXPLORING EVERY INTEREST

From martial arts to barbeque,
Andover students always pursue their passions.

With the little free time that the busy Andover schedule provides, some students choose to sleep or to play video games or even to sit around in a general malaise. However, most students greatly enrich their PA experience by joining one of the many interest-based clubs on campus. At the Fall Club Rally, students could choose from among the many booths of screaming club heads. The clubs are as unique and varied as our student body. From Math Club and Engineering Club, to the Andover Barbeque Society, to the Martial Arts Club, there is a club to fit everyone's interests. And if by some chance a student doesn't find his ideal club, he or she can start one. The Math Club met regularly to discuss everything from Eigenvectors to non-Euclidean geometry. Engineering Club built its own go-cart as well as a high-powered fruit launcher. The Andover Barbeque Society kept everyone warm and well fed on that snowy Andover-Exeter Weekend, and a myriad other clubs embraced innumerable disciplines and pursuits. There's a club for every interest. That's something that truly makes Andover awesome.

1. The board of The Philomathean Society, master debaters all, meet, fittingly enough, in the Debate Room.

2. Engineering Club's self-built go-cart, gasoline powered with three gears, cools off in James Paolino's '05 workshop.

3. Instructor in Mathematics Patrick Farrell and Emily Bargar '05 examine the assortment of eigen-vectors on the board during one of the many late-night Math Club meetings. 4. Members of the Andover Barbeque Society pose in front of their beloved gas grill during one of numerous fall cookouts.

PLAYING THE PART

The “Captivity of Pixie Shedman” storms onto PA stage...

The fall term Theatre 520 production, “The Captivity of Pixie Shedman” by Romulus Linney, stormed onto PA stage with eager spirits. Performed in Steinbach Theatre, the play brought together some of the schools most talented thespians. Instructor in Theatre and Dance Mark Efinger '74 directed the play. Stage manager and theatre producer Katie Nadworny '05, directed one of the most moving scenes in the play. Virginia Sweeney and Ben Lasman, both '06, Cristian Monterozza, Adam Holt and Chris Zegel, all '05, depicted the Shedman family. The play tells the tale of Bertram Shedman's exploration of his deceased grandmother's diary. As Bertram reads further, the ghosts of the Shedman family come alive on stage. The deceased Pixie, her initial captor, and her son took the stage and acted out the heart-wrenching story. By the end of the play, the ghosts had revealed a fundamental truth about the family and had set the struggling writer Bertarm on a path of resolution and self-acceptance. Following its succesful run at PA, the play was performed in a New England high school drama competition.

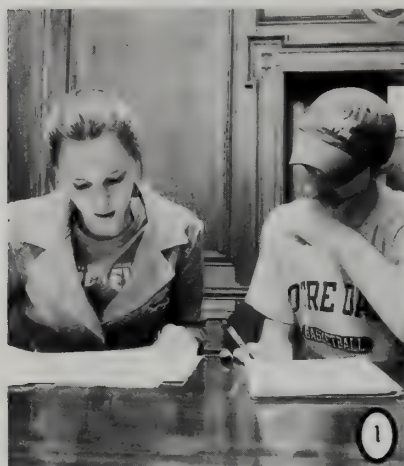

1. Ben Lasman '06 presents a dramatic monologue. 2. Adam Holt's character turns away in disgust from Cristian Monterroza, both '05. 3. Lasman pleads with the show's title character, Pixie Shedman, portrayed by Virginia Sweeney '06. 4. Instructor in Theatre and Dance and director of "The Captivity of Pixie Shedman" Mark Efinger '74, offers advice to the cast. 5. Lasman, Sweeney, Holt and Zegel take center stage in the Shedman family feud.

1. Day Student Reps Cassie Ornell and Ben Hoerner, '05 review the school Constitution. 2. Senior Rep Grant Yoshitsu explains the DC system to two Junior Reps. 3. Nick Smith Wang '05 and two Upper Representatives discuss the upcoming renovation in Commons. 4. School President Daniel Adler '05, flashes his trademark smile for the rest of the Student Council to see. 5. President Daniel Adler '05, Vice-President Morissa Sobelson '05 and Faculty Adviser Tracy Ainsworth discuss the upcoming School Senate meeting.

SEAT OF POWER

The Student Council influences and improves the Andover community

The Student Council entered the 2004-2005 academic year with an aggressive agenda to reform school rules and policies. President Daniel Adler had already worked hard at adding a few luxuries to Commons, such as a brand new toaster, Captain Crunch cereal, and most importantly, a friendly and productive working relationship between the Student Council and the school administration and faculty.

At the very beginning of this year, Adler and the rest of the Council implemented a new book-buying program for students. Aimed at alleviating the huge lines at the bookstore, the program was a resounding success. Through the year, the Student Council, meeting in the Trustees' Room in GW, continued to strive and push for reforms that greatly improved the life and experience of students on campus.

"Serving as the honorary co-captain of FLX and scoring that team's only goal of the season were the two best moments in my athletic career at PA."

-Peter Nelson '05

"For the first time in my PA career, I looked forward to going to sports every day in the term. Cluster soccer works so well because everybody — regardless of skill level and passion — feels at home. Sports is really boiled down to its bare essentials: a bunch of kids just running around, kicking a ball and having fun."

-Billy Doyle '05

"The remix is the best soccer team to ever grace PA soccer fields. The fact that we only scored one goal all season does not shroud the overwhelming skill and spirit on the FLX team. Not to sound conceited, but basically everyone wanted to be us." -Louisa Rockwell '06

THE REAL DEAL

Only the strong survive...

Cluster soccer. The name alone sends shivers of excitement down the backs of so many on the Andover campus. From the players to the cluster deans, cluster soccer is a game of pride and sportsmanship. There may be no prize at the end, no cup to be won, no speeches by the victors, but there is a feeling of contentment by the players who won, and those who did not. There is a feeling of accomplishment for all those who scored a goal for their team, or made a defensive play, or who came up big just when they were needed. Cluster soccer is not a game that is centered around star players. There may be an all-star team, but it does not show the true cluster spirit.

Cluster is a team game, a game where even the least athletically interested person can get excited and go out to win for their team. It's a game where every last player counts, and a team is only as strong as its weakest link. These weak links are not judged by skill but by heart, and for the first time in many a year every player had the heart to play this year. There were none who did not buy into the cluster philosophy of effort and good will towards teammates and opponents, none who were unwilling to give it their all for their teams. For those 40 minutes as the players take the field, the playing field is leveled, and all are equal, striving for the victory. This is cluster soccer. - Elliot Beck '05

“Cluster is like the best thing that’s ever happened to me. I was on FLX, and though we may not have dominated on the field, we showed up everyone with our superior fashion, cheers, and halftime snacks. And trust me, that’s what cluster sports are really about.”

-Claire Collery '06

RACING STRIPES

Racing the clock through sun and snow...

The Andover Boys Cross-country team started the 2004 season off well, bringing home a first placed trophy from the Canterbury Invitational. After narrowly earning first place honors at Canterbury, Andover went on to beat Choate 22-37, with impressive early season showings from Captain Jon Hillman '05 and powerhouse Justin Lee '06. From there, the team went on to win two more races against NMH and Deerfield. At NMH, Andover rested Lee, whose ankle injury could have been made worse by the treacherous conditions. Next, the team, battered from recent illness, traveled to St. Paul's, only to receive one of their two losses all season.

At the JV level, Andover went with one loss all season, falling to St. Paul's by just one point. The Second Seven would develop enough through the season to reverse this score by Interschols, where Chris Donais '05 and Seán Hamilton '06 stepped up to fill the void and take second and third place.

Returning home for the only home meet of the season on Parent's Weekend, Andover soundly defeated Deerfield 23-37. Andover's pack theory worked to perfection as they managed to wedge four runners around Deerfield's second runner. In one of the more decisive moments of the season, the boys traveled up to Exeter to take on a strong, fast team. Exeter ran well, taking the first 3 places, securing the win. Everything, however, rested on the performances at Interschols. Two teams of seven traveled down to Hotchkiss and ran impressively on 3 inches of snow. Andover took second place overall, falling short by eight points to Exeter. Hamilton, Donais, Lee, and PG Idris Jatoi '05 earned All New England Honors in the race. At the JV level, Wes Howe claimed first place overall, leading the team to victory.

Overall, it was a successful season for the Big Blue cross-country team. Hillman led the team both on and off the courses, and he played a pivotal role in every victory. The leadership and speed brought to the team by the seniors will be sorely missed, but several underclassmen wait in the wings, ready to help challenge for the next title.

FAST GIRLS

Queens of the Great Lawn

Most people think of cross-country as an individual sport. They are wrong. When you have logged over 200 miles with 37 girls in one season, you form a team. From our first practice in the claustrophobic heat of the sanctuary to our last in the freezing slush of Andover-Exeter, our team united against the elements.

Let's go over our intense record: most of the team rocked an eight-mile run to Smolak farms (all the way to the Boxford town line...that's right, we needed day excuses). Every member of the team raced at least twice, and there was an abundance of personal bests. Twelve girls sprinted thrice up a hill so steep we had to drive there (once again, day excuses). We have all done one push up at the top of Holt Hill, prior to a speed workout, of course.

As for Interschols, that deserves its own story - five inches of snow, 11 other teams, and one hardcore team in blue who happens to be the second overall team in NEPSAC. Rock on. With cowbell.

Varsity Field Hockey

BACK ROW: Coach Dolan, J. Harisaides '08, A. Hill '06, A. Boylan '07, J. Jammal '06, S. Demetriou '05, M. Montecalvo '06, B. Van Valkenburg '08, A. Filiberti '07, Coach Fenton

This year's Andover field hockey team was a mélange of returning players who brought experience and leadership and new players who brought fresh talent and goals for the season. Led by co-captains Nikki Crocker '05 and Kelly Stecker '05, the girls had a strong record of 11 wins and three losses, not including their additional two wins in an early-season scrimmage and over Loomis-Chafee in the NEPSAC tournament. Before falling to Hotchkiss in overtime in the semifinals of the tournament, the girls were able to show off their dexterous stick skills and fiery spirit that is only to be found on the Blue side of the field.

The season's big wins were over St. Marks, Nobles, Deerfield, and Exeter. Extinguishing teams' abilities to get a good shot on net, defenders Jevan Jammal '06, Alyssa Hill '06, Lindsay Moramarco '06, and Annie Boylan '07 showed finesse when playing in front of both Ale Moss '07 and Sam Demetriou '05 in net. Up front, forwards Crocker, Lauren Seno '05, and Kat Dix '05 never failed to send shot after shot spiraling toward the opposing team's net.

In an especially exciting victory, the ladies in blue bested rival Exeter 3-1 during this year's Andover/Exeter day, playing on a bright rectangle of green amidst the snows of Siberia. This earned them a spot in the league tournament as a No. 3 seed, an opportunity that Big Blue capitalized on by shutting out Loomis at home in the quarterfinals.

Seven minutes into the Loomis game, Megan Montecalvo '06 scored PA's first goal. Never relenting, Andover scored another goal only 10 minutes later when Arielle Filiberti '07 was able to create a fast break which resulted in a breakaway, and Stecker then took advantage of a penalty shot and scored, bringing them to a 2-0 lead. To finalize Andover's victory, Carolyn Pollard '07 maneuvered through the Loomis defensive line and scored the third and final goal. Stecker commented on the game, "You could tell that we wanted it more, and we played our game."

1. Carolyn Pollard '07 carries the ball upfield during a snowy game against Exeter. 2. Girls at Abbot Academy crowd around the ball during an early field hockey game. 3. Defender Jevan Jammal '06 guards the ball from an opponent. 4. Abbot Academy students play an orderly game of field hockey. 5. Co-Captain Nikki Crocker '05 runs down the field. 6. The ladies of Abbot Academy, Andover's former sister school down the hill, play field hockey in collared shirts with ruffles and long flowing skirts - quite a different uniform than that worn by today's girls.

"This is the greatest team I have ever been a part of, but it isn't because we had so many great games and played so well. It's because of how much we wanted to win and wanted to keep playing together. During the semifinal game [of the NEPSAC post-season tournament] you could tell that we were not playing as hard as we could for ourselves but for the girl next to us, and she was doing the same. That's what made us a team, and I have so much love for these girls because we left everything we had on the field. I couldn't have asked for a better team or a better season." -Alyssa Hill '06

SCORING TOUCHDOWNS

Heading for the end zone...

The Andover football team opened the 2004 season hoping to improve upon a disappointing 2003 campaign. With the arrival of six postgraduates to complement six returning starters, the team had its sights set on the championship.

On offense, Andover provided opponents with an intimidating attack. Newcoming linemen Wally Adedokun, Nick Hennessey, Adrian Nelson, Casey Shannon, running back Jerell Smith, and receivers Joseph Furnari and Tom Tassinari complemented a strong returning core of fullbacks Matt Ward and Platt, quarterback Joseph Lokitis, and receivers Jonathan Dent, Joseph Furnari, Winston Shaw, and co-captain Stephen Sherrill.

However, the defense was the strength of this team, featuring Adedokun, Hennessey, Nelson, Shannon, Kenechi Igbokwe, Joseph O'Hern, and Stephen Severo on the line, linebackers Mason Fried, Dent, co-captain Evan Platt, and Ward, and defensive backs Bobby Spang, Shaw, and Furnari, with help from Chris Bramwell, Peter Casey, and Sam Conte. PG Kicker Denys Levin greatly boosted the special teams.

PA opened with a close 3-0 win against Loomis, a 35-yard Levin boot tallying the only points. In Week 2 came perhaps the most exciting football game since A/E '95, with a 14-12 victory over Hotchkiss. After that thrilling victory, however, consecutive losses, one against Choate and the second heartbreaker against Cushing, ended the dream of a perfect season. Andover rebounded strongly, pulling out a strong 12-3 victory against Northfield-Mount Hermon in Week 5. After a sour matchup with Deerfield, Mo's Marauders bounced back, trouncing Tabor 21-13 to set up a match up with Exeter.

Though the team fell just short against Exeter, it did not dampen what turned about to be a great season. This was truly a great team: a great group of guys came together quickly and banged out some great wins over the course the season. With a strong group of returnees, PA football 2005 should continue to improve upon the successes of this year's team.

"Exactly 52 years ago the 1952 undefeated Andover football team was the subject of a lengthy column by Bob Cooke, of the then New York Herald Tribune. He wrote, 'Andover was matched against its most popular enemy, Exeter, for the seventy-second time. Had it not been for a humane clock which ran out of steam before the Andover backs, the victors might have commemorated the event by winning 72 to 0. As it was, Andover settled for a score of 59 to 0, the most decisive beating it ever posted against a futile foe.' These words still resonate for me to this day."

Going for the goals...

The boy's varsity soccer team, coming off its thrilling run to the New England Final in 2003, reloaded with new players and formed a new identity in 2004. Co-captains Nate Scott and Brendan McManus headed the team's fine senior leadership that also included Nate Kellogg, Andrew Geraghty, Ben Hoerner, Pat Shannon and Ryan McDougall. PGs Martin Donohoe, a standout at left back, and John Tarson, who proved to be one of the top forwards in New England, combined with new lower and star midfielder Alex Clifford to add tremendous talent to an already formidable starting lineup. With three top recruits, strong senior leaders and the returning Fab-Four of Mike Spiak, TJ Thompson, Pumi Maqubela and Justin Wu, the boy's soccer team certainly had high hopes for 2004.

The boys, looking to improve upon last year's second-place finish, got off to a fast start by topping Brooks, last year's New England Champions, 3-2 in the season opener and remained undefeated through their first six games.

However, thanks to season-ending injuries Tarson, Hoerner and Geraghty and other nagging ailment to Maqubela, Shannon and Wu, the boys struggled to a 3-3 record pressured by one of the hardest schedules in New England. Tough losses came at the hands of Chocoma and a powerful Winchendon squad. But despite their injuries and tough losses, the boys played their best on Parents' Weekend under the lights of Phelps Stadium to take apart Deerfield, an eventual New England semi-finalist in 2004, 3-0. The team also fought back from a 2-0 second half deficit at home against Exeter to salvage a 2-2 tie and take home the Dunbar Cup, the trophy awarded each year to the winner of the Andover, Exeter, Deerfield, and NM series of games. The boys varsity soccer team has now held the Dunbar Cup 10 times since 1991.

Girls soccer has another great season.

After a season filled with lifting victories and difficult losses, the girl's varsity soccer team ended their season with an exhilarating win over Exeter on Andover/Exeter weekend. Finishing with a 6-8-1 record, the girl's team possessed key wins over opponents such as Governor Dummer, St. Paul's, N.M.H, and Exeter. Throughout the season the girls stuck together and worked hard to improve upon both their weaknesses and strengths. This season proved to be a challenging one, and the team successfully showed their commitment to each other and to the team through relentless hard work, perseverance, and dedication. The team will graduate 6 valuable seniors this fall. Up top, forward Charlotte MacMillan will be missed for her upbeat attitude, competitiveness, and her solid shots on net. The spirited midfielder Katie Koh, with her dedication and hard work, will also be missed. Catriona McGovern contributed immensely in the midfield with her determination and commitment to the team. Jean Marie Gossard continuously prevented opponents from dribbling past the 18 yard line, and consistently blocked dangerous crosses and shots. Cara Ruccolo, one of the co-captains and an extremely versatile player, brought aggression and skill to the field with her successful tackles and vital defensive clears. Finally, Jessica Taggart, a fullback and the other co-captain, brought composure to the defense with her skill and knowledge of the game.

BLUE MEN

They stir up the water
yet another season...

This season was a bumpy ride for boys' water polo. Losing 10 senior players after 2003, the team was left with only a few varsity returners. Yet with new talent on the rise, the team put forth valiant effort during the entire season. After a few frustrating losses against Loomis, the team focused on the fundamentals of the game to eventually score huge wins against NMH, Worcester and Williston. They ended the season down a few games in the final tournament, but have very high hopes for the future of the program. Jamie "The Liquidator" Neuwirth '06 took the sprints and led the team in goals scored. Captain Rob "The Dominator" Anderson '06 was a figure for the team to rally around in addition to playing a solid two-meter position for most of the season. One of only three seniors on the team, goalie Chris "The Brick Wall" Zegel '05 supplied a strong defensive game. Peter Accomando '05 and Charlie Thornton '05 found a passion for the game and accompanied a young team to a successful season.

Rocking Memorial Gym to get us through another Andover winter...

The 2004- 2005 Phillips Academy boys' varsity basketball season was full of ups and downs.

As a member of the team, I had a perspective that not too many others had. I saw a team that grew throughout the season, despite facing defeat.

Many obstacles were thrown in the team's way, and the group of 14 players rose beyond them every time. Coach Modeste and Coach Schneider proved to be great assets to and advocates of the team, as they never gave up hope and never stopped supporting the team.

Looking back on the season, certain highlights and players come to mind. Highlights of the season include our best game, in which we played Northfield Mount Hermon at home. Although we lost the game by 13 points, it was to a team that was at one time ranked 10th in the country, and we proved to ourselves that we indeed can play at a level much greater than anyone else previously thought. When thinking about key players, Joey Lokitis '06 comes to mind. Joey had a tough job, as he was immediately labeled "the scorer" on the team. He responded to this label positively, though, and proved to be a true team player and great leader. Our post- graduates, Nick Hennessey, Adrian Nelson, and Oystein Auckland, all proved to be positive additions to the team as well, as they fought hard for the Big Blue.

As this year's Uppers move into higher leadership positions for next season, the team will surely see much success in 2006.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Nothing but net, the girls of varsity basketball pull through despite injuries and illness.

The 2004-2005 Girls' Varsity basketball team proved to be a strong and talented competitor throughout the season. Although our record did not reflect our incredible talent and potential, the team battled hard throughout the season. The very young team was Co-Captained by Nell Beattie '05 and Steph Krant '05 and boasted only five returners and an entirely new coaching staff. The girls suffered in the beginning from multiple injuries and sicknesses. Nonetheless, when our team was finally healthy and ready to roll, we picked up speed and took New England by surprise. Although we had trouble beating some of the more difficult teams, we were able to execute and pull through when it really mattered. We missed playing Nobles, Choate and Deerfield early on because of bad weather, and all three teams showed little effort in rescheduling (perhaps not wanting to add to their loss column?). At Andover/Exeter we had an exciting win over Exeter for a second time with a score of 46-36, thus ending the season on a high note with great expectations for the upcoming season. With seven returning players for next year, the team will look to the skilled rising Seniors Jackie Price '05 and Sarah Thomas '05 to lead the 2005-2006 team to victory.

Dominating the ice...

The Andover boys' hockey team enjoyed another outstanding season this year. Combining leadership from the 8 seniors and great play from the talented underclassmen, the team was once again a force in New England prep school hockey. With greater depth than ever seen before on the Big Blue ice, everyone needed to fill a variety of roles if the team was to have a successful season.

The year started strong with four dominating wins including a great performance against St. Paul's beating them 9-3 before heading to the Flood-Marr Tournament. Although the tournament didn't go as well as hoped, a notable 3-3 tie against powerhouse Salisbury was a well-played game for the team. Including the last game of the tournament, the Big Blue won 8 of their next 9 games. The 5-4 overtime victory over long-time rival Exeter was certainly the highlight of the very important winning streak. Important wins down the stretch against St. Sebastian's, Nobles, Belmont Hill, Tabor, and NMH all give the Big Blue a good chance of making the NEPSHA Division 1 playoffs.

The team had an exciting final matchup with a good Exeter team to solidify their position in the playoffs this year. With promising young forwards, strong defensemen, and a returning goaltender, the team will once again be strong next season.

GOING FOR GOALS

Gliding across the ice.

It was said midway through the season by one of the many dedicated team parents, "If we played 14 minute periods, we would be undefeated" and this statement seemed to resonate through our entire season. Losing only three of seven games by more than one point, many of which were scored in the last minutes of a period, there were few teams that this year's squad couldn't contend with and many which couldn't contend with us. We blew past Milton, NMH, AHS, Thayer, St. Pauls all by a margin of five or more, with everyone on the team notching a goal or two.

With only three seniors, Nikki Crocker '05, Erica Christensen '05 and Lauren Seno '05, this team was young, ready and willing. Heading in to Andover/Exeter weekend with a 6-0 win against the Red earlier this season, it was game to send off three remarkable seniors.

The big question mark going into this season was who was going to step up in net with the graduation of Captain O'Hara Shipe '04, but new upper Ainslee Lahue '06 dominated between the pipes, and with Melissa McDonald '06 supporting her, there will be no such questions come next season. Next year's team will be led by a huge upper class, and should make a considerable dent in next year's New England Playoffs.

Most Andover students prefer to hoard Commons' hot chocolate supply and stay indoors under heavy comforters watching reruns of The O.C. during the somewhat brutal winter term. A call from Dean of Students Marlys Edwards asking for snow czars to start shoveling sends groans of frustration throughout the school...But not for this group of zealous boys and girls. The Big Blue's own co-ed Nordic ski team celebrates at the first hint of a snow-expecting sky. Despite an undermanned boys' team and a young girls' team, both attacked schools throughout New England all winter long as they traveled continually north to compete. In an early January race hosted by Cardigan Mt. School at Waterville Valley, NH, the PA girls' team took third place among seven schools. The strong finish was highlighted by Captain Kendra Allenby's 12th place finish overall and by strong first-ever races by Arielle Filiberti '07 and Morgan Broccoli '07. The boys team, with only three racers, was forced to settle for last place among the eight teams in the competition. Miles Canaday '05 led the Blue with a 44th overall, and rookie Ben Bramhall '07 finished 51st in his first race. Midseason, in Waterville once again, the PA skiers finished a strong third among seven teams in the girls' race. Still somewhat undermanned, the boys' team placed seventh in their competition. All six PA racers finished in the top 17 among 38 girl skiers. Meanwhile, Canaday came in 35th among the boys with Bramhall close behind at 37th. The NEPSAC interscholastic races at Gould Academy in Maine proved quite a success for the skiers. The boys team finished 11th, and the girls had a great race and took 3rd place. It was a tough meet as only the best members of the teams were there. The boys were just edged by NMH, Hyde and Brewster with a tough loss in the relay. The girls' team had a very tight finish in 3rd place. After the morning individual race, the girls were sitting 4th, just 4 points behind Putney and 7 points ahead of KUA. Filiberti continued to shine in her first year of skiing with an 11th place finish. She was followed closely by Roxy Pierson '07 and Allenby. The young team, both boys' and girls' factions, improved immensely with each race and looks forward to another snowy winter in 2006.

Boys' Squash plays with panache.

This year's boys varsity squash had a season full of success despite a rocky start. Led by veteran coach Tom Cone, the team went 12-4, with strong play throughout. Although squash is often seen as an individual sport, the team make-up is extremely important. An oft-quoted squash maxim is "a win at number seven is just as important as a win at number one." Four of the seven players must win their matches for a team to win its match. It is therefore very important for a team to be strong from top to bottom, and this was hard for the boys' squash team this year as they lost a team leader and their number four player, Harry Goldstein '05, due to a back injury. Despite this injury the team persevered, and throughout the year worked hard to come back from this loss. Goldstein did his part, coming to practices and supporting the team constantly, and everyone else stepped up as well. Newcomers to this team included Ned Henningsen '05 and Simon Keyes '06. Neither was particularly used to the competition at such a high level, but each learned and thrived, becoming integral parts of this team. Returning members Elliot Beck '05, Derek deSvastich '06, Dan Wagman '06, Henry Manice '05 and Greg Feldmann '05 all also contributed. The team went to two championships this year. The team championships were held at Yale University, and involved many schools Phillips Academy does not play during the regular season.

The Team placed 12th at this tournament, not a bad result against many teams with highly ranked national players. One team even had a professionally ranked player. At Interschols the team fared far better, exceeding initial expectations by ending up 6th, despite tough draws and some bad breaks along the way. All in all the season was a success, and every player proved their mettle over and over again.

The girls' squash team significantly improved from last year. With five seniors on the team, we had a lot of experience which other teams lacked. Because most of the girls on the team played together for three years, we worked cohesively and coached each other to help beat our opponents. Throughout the season, the seniors were playing the best squash of their Andover careers. All of the girls on the team improved throughout the season. The addition of two new players also helped us become a stronger team. Our team went from having a rough season last year with numerous losses, to only losing two matches this year. We even beat Exeter twice! The team was able to beat Deerfield and Taft, teams which are very strong and beat us badly last year. Each girl on the team was enthusiastic and confident about her position on the team, helping us to win our matches. After struggling to win matches for the past two years, this year the girls' squash team went out with a big bang."

The 2005 was an exciting and victory filled season for the varsity boys' swim team. Coming into the season most people were skeptical that the boys' team, consisting almost entirely of underclassmen, would be able to perform after losing a talented group of seniors after the 2004 season. Whoever said that was way off. Every swimmer on the team, including freshmen, rose to the challenge. The lone four-year senior on the team, Charlie "Breaststroke Machine" Thornton, dubbed the boys as, "the hardest working and most disciplined team" he has been with during his time at Andover. With the speed and leadership of Captain Jamie "The Liquidator" Neuwirth '06, Jeff "Kingfish" Zhou

'06 and Mike "Master Stroker" Preston '05, the Big Blue had one of their most successful seasons in recent memory posting a record of 4-1-1. The most exciting meet of the season came against the very talented Deerfield squad. Andover was down by a few points late in the meet and needed some first place finishes to send Deerfield home with a tie. Thanks to a quick pump up speech from coach Hugon, the boys pulled it off, placing one-two in the final relay to end the meet in a draw. After a successful 2005 season the boys' swim team looks to return in 2006 with almost all the same guys plus some new swimmers, all ready to do whatever it takes to achieve their goal and obtain the coveted Interschols' championship.

S'WOMEN

The girls' swim team continues to be strong with another year of victories.

Everybody's seen it through the big windows—the six solitary diving blocks, the massive record board looming above, the anonymous swimmers going back and forth effortlessly—smelt the chlorine's undeniable presence, and almost slipped on lakes of water in the locker rooms. It's a second home for 19 girls in the winter. It's a place where we laugh, dance, scream, and, most importantly, swim... fast. It's the pool, and we are the 2005 Andover girls' swim team. Coming off a 2004 season punctuated by a one point victory at the New England Championships, and NE Championship wins in the two previous seasons, we had a strong returning class of lowers, uppers, and seniors, and a few new faces only added to our depth this season. We were lucky to have all of our meets in our home pool except for one, and it truly was an advantage as the girls clocked some amazing and inspiring swims—with at least one person racing to a best time in every meet. We were 5-1 on the season with the New England Championships waiting for us on March 6. As Murph says at the end of our pre-meet meditation sessions, "Let's go out there and have fun," and that's exactly what we do. The thing that separates this team from any other is its dynamic. We come to practice and, no matter what happened during the day, each person leaves with a smile on her face. We have created hundreds of memories—tangerine speedos, one-two steps, Hil Duff choruses, loosening belt buckles after our many scrumptious team dinners, and, most importantly, monsta love. We are proud to have been a part of a team that is truly something special. MonstaLove!

RUNNING CREW

Boys' and Girls' indoor track went full throttle this season...

Perhaps the most distinct thing about the 2004-05 indoor track team was the fact that there were relatively few seniors on the team. Injuries, preparation for spring sports, the all-new (and very attractive) slide, and cluster basketball claimed most of the seniors that the team generally looks to for guidance and strength. Underclassmen were forced to step up into number one spots in several events, including the shot put and the long jump. The distance crew scored a lot of points for the Big Blue this season. Jon Hillman and Chris Donais, both '05, and Sean Hamilton '06, were perhaps the most dependable members of the boys' team. On the girls side, Becca Howe '06 led the small squad of distance runners, going undefeated in the mile and only losing once in the 1000 yards. Newcomer Kit Harris '07 came out of nowhere to become the top runner in the 600 and shows great promise for upcoming seasons. Also very consistent for the Blue were the throwers.

The boys, led by Joe O'Hern and Casey Shannon, both '07, and Kenechi Igbokwe '05, placed in the top five every meet. Senior Yaa Frimpong and Aba Temeng '06 also placed every meet. Another bright spot for the Blue boys was the pole vault, where Mario Noyola '06 continued his dominance. The girls dominated the other field events and showed their dominance in their last meet of the season, placing first in every event at Exeter. The pole vaulting crew including Jeannette Francis '06 consistently placed and ended up sweeping the event at Exeter. The long-jumping powerhouse of Colleen Thurman '07 and Maura Mulroy '07 usually placed first and second. Future Captain Marty Schnure '06, Mbechi Erondur '06 and Captain Cassie Tognoni '05 placed Erondur '06 and Captain Cassie Tognoni '05 placed consistently in the hurdles. Tognoni also went undefeated in the high jump and qualified for the Indoor National Championships.

In the sprints, Sonia DeYoung '05 led the way, usually leaving her competition in the 50 yards and 300 yards in the dust. The girls 4x440 relay team, comprised of Francis, Harris, Schnure and Tognoni, was also very successful, coming from behind to win at Exeter. More exciting, the team went on to break the school record (set by last years team including Schnure and Tognoni) by over a second. All in all, the girls' season was marred by lack of numbers, but prolific in individual successes. Despite struggles in other events, the boys in Blue never gave on the season. Hard work in practice (mean furious pacing by Greg Hsu and Spence Johnson '06 and Captain Kojo DeGraft-Hanson '05) led to personal and seasonal bests every meet. As DeGraft-Hanson put before an early-season meet, "The team with the most depth is going to win. In track, depth is more than just how many good athletes a team has. Depth is grit and determination. Depth is heart." The boys' 2004-05 track team may have been short on senior leadership, but they made it through the season with a lot of heart and hard work.

1. Andover men surge forward to attain another victorious sprint. 2. Catherine Wright '06 and Katherine Chen '06 both get ready for another fast race.

Wrestling has yet another strong season.

"The Exeter match was the most amazing thing I've ever witnessed. It was straight out of a Disney movie."

-Bradford Colbert

1. Dan Hackney '05 gets a strong grip on his Tabor opponent. 2. Gabriel Worgaftik '06 struggles to get out of a tight bind. 3. An Andover player manages to stay out of pin.

Alphabetical Order: Wale Adedokun, Kassie Archambault, Eric Bair, Alex Bois, Nick Bowen, Will Bragdon, Luk Cahill, Gary Cao, Sam Cartmell, AJ Charles, Jared Cheatham, Hector Cintron, Alex Clifford, Rachel Cohen, Brad Colbert, Mike DeFelippo, Colin Dunn, Pat Fender, Amy Fenstermach, Dan Fromson, Randy Garcia, Addisc Godine, Alex Green, Daniel Hackney, Evan Hawk, Benjamin Lacetti, Ben Levenback, Christopher Li, Andrei Manda, Gordon Murphy, Alice Nam, Thao Nguyen, Akshay Paintal, Alex Ryan, Mark Shvartsman, James Siddall, Dougal Sutherland, Victor Vazquez, Noah Warren, Gabriel Worgaftik

led by co-captains Mark Shvartsman '05 and Gabe Worgaftik '06, the Big Blue wrestling team followed up one of its best seasons in recent years with another typically strong season in 04-05, compiling a 12-5 record and a solid third place finish at the Class 'A' league tournament. Dual-meet highlights included a 38-39 victory over local rival and co-ISL champs Brooks, and a thrilling come-from-behind 35-34 win against Exeter. The team also had a number of outstanding individual performances as well with a number of starters reaching the 20 win mark. Andover crowned four champions at the Northern New England Invitational: Ashay Paintal '07 (103 pounds weight class), Worgaftik (125 pounds), Shvartsman (135 pounds), and Wale Adedokun '05 (275 pounds). At the Class A tournament held at Hyde Ct. Andover performed exceptionally well out performing their seeds and a predicted 5th place finish, as Paintal, Worgaftik, and Adedokun all captured league titles for the first time.

Standout Dan Hackney '05 contributed yet another solid season, with another 20 win season and a 4th place Class A finish. At the National Prep Tournament Adedokun took 6th place, earning Prep All-American honors along the way. Though they will be sorely missed, the team graduates just three seniors and a plethora of returning '06 and '07 starters look to do even more damage in the New England Prep leagues next year.

Sheena Hilton, so many times over the past three years, I couldn't believe I let you get me into this, but now that it's over, I want to say thank you and wish you all the best as you go on. Since I'm at the end of this whole grade school thing which has consumed my childhood, I'd like to say thanks to all of my friends and family who have supported me over the years. Mom and Dad, you guys made me what I am. Aba and Araba, y'all took care of whatever they forgot. Brandon and Justin, we're gonna be tight forever. To the MoTstePpaz, we got through these last two years together, but this ain't the end. Katie, Sarah, Yendi, and Jean, I love y'all. Jason and Sung, room 302 - the 5 room quad. Park, Hee J, Freddy J, G-Boy, Leilah, Elia, Maggie, Jordan, Hubright (where you at, dog?), Amanda, P. Dye, Lauren & Heather, Rebekah, Sairah, that one kid I forgot to mention... And hey, I'd go on, but it's 1:30 AM and I've got three subjects to finish.

The Sound of the Trees

I wonder about the trees.
Why do we wish to bear
Forever the noise of these
More than another noise
So close to our dwelling place?
We suffer them by the day
Till we lose all measure of pace,
And fixity in our joys,
And acquire a listening air.
They are that talks of going
But never gets away;
And that talks no less for knowing,
As it grows wiser and older,
That now it means to stay.

My feet tug at the floor
And my head sways to my shoulder
Sometimes when I watch trees sway,
From the window or the door.
I shall set forth for somewhere,
I shall make the restless choice
Some day when they are in voice
And tossing so as to scare
The white clouds over them on.
I shall have less to say,
But I shall be gone.

— Robert Frost

"Out of the silver heat mirage he in. The sky burned, and under him the paving was a black mirror reflecting sun-fire. Sweat sprayed his skin with each foot strike so that he ran in a hot mist of his own creation. With each slap on the softened asphalt, his soles absorbed heat that rose through his arches and ankles and the stems of his shins. It was a carnival of pain, but he loved each stride because running distilled him to his essence and the heat hastened this distillation." - James Tabor, from "The Runner"

If I have learned anything over the course of the past four years, I have learned that health and happiness must be cherished above all. I have learned that in the face of change one must always hold on to family, friends, and faith. I have learned that we possess more strength than we ever imagine possible. I have learned that we can love inexplicably. I have learned that there will always be a tomorrow.

First I want to say it was a very good year for me, I had a lot of fun, learned a lot of things and at the end Andover is almost as cool as France!
And I think that what made it so cool is the people that I met here, and I want to thank them for this. First people from my dorm, my awesome German roommate, Julian, the 3rd floor southside, we had so much fun this year and the most awesome house conselor: Mr Zaeder. Thanks to some of the faculty member who have been very nice to me and to Ms Murata. And finally to all the friends I made, Americans or internationals, I won't forget you guys I promise.

To my friends: Ladies (no boys allowed, for once) - It's been a crazy 2 years, and at this point, I'm going to say that you all probably know me better than I would ever know myself. Especially you, Meg and Nat - of would this thank being patient or this understanding, even though I know it wasn't always easy. Here's to everything all that we are and whatever we may become. I wish you all happy and healthy futures, and may we never lose each other.

we've been, for never judging me. Thank more of me. Thank you, Gibby, you, Marguerite, give anything. Sweet and you, Lou's, yourself 100% time. Through whatever "it" love never your support wanted, and for that I am eternally grateful. So, like they say, you can pick your friends, and you can pick your nose. But you can't pick your relatives. And thank God for that, because I never could have picked a better bunch than you.

And now I'm ready. I've finished here. I've outgrown this place, I mean, don't and it never are other places to go and people to meet and thing do, and that's what I'm after. So when you see me walking away, please don't yell after me or try to stop me, because I won't hear you, and even if I do, I won't listen. Just give me your address if you want a postcard. And try to remember: for all I say and all I do, I only seek companionship. Love and xox, Laura Marie Scinto

To my family: Thank you, Mom, you, Dad, for always expecting for lending me some humor. for proving that I can survive. Thank you, Liza, for being mellow. And thank for being of the it all, was, your fathered, never so I'm going to pack up and take off. get me wrong: it's been lacked for excitement, but are other places to go and people to meet and thing do, and that's what I'm after. Mom and Dad- I could have done none of it without you. I hope I've become someone you can be proud of. I love you both.

Tess and Haley- You guys are amazing. Take care of this place once I'm gone.

The Soccer Team- Thanks for the best season I ever had. Much love to my seniors B-Mac, Donohoe, Tarson, Dougs, Shannon, Hoerner, Kellogg, Geraghty, and, of course, Wilkinson.

Hearsey House- Thanks for letting me into your home, even if I was classified as a "non-resident". You guys got me through Senior Year. Live strong.

Harry, Mac, Kyle, Lebow, and Bill- Thanks for always making me laugh... even when it was a completely inappropriate time to do so. I'll miss you boys.

The 7th Period/meatstik Crew- You guys are what I will remember about Andover. I love every one of you, and I'll be waiting at our 5 year reunion on the meatstik field.

Ned, Bardo, Thorn, and Chas- We didn't all do it together, but we did it. Thanks for being there since Day 1...literally.

To All the Ladies- Thanks for keeping it interesting.

To Peers - I have had it with this school! The low test scores, class after class of ugly, ugly children!

To Best Friends - To those long gone and those who will remain, to Rockwell, to Chop-Chop, to Bishop, to Zaeder, to Ben, to Chaz, and especially to Kenechi. You've made this place a home I will dearly miss. I have great faith in fools, my friends call it self-confidence.

To Family - An infuriating brother, a manipulative sister, two parents always pushing me to do more, and a host of others, some bearing bread.

Without you, I would not be. Thank you.

To Myself - Bongo is somewhat nifty...

The time will come when diligent research over long periods will bring to light things which now lie hidden. A single lifetime, even though entirely devoted to the sky, would not be enough for the investigation of so vast a subject... And so this knowledge will be unfolded only through long successive ages. There will come a time when our descendants will be amazed that we did not know things that are so plain to them... Many discoveries are reserved for ages still to come, when memory of us will have been effaced. Our universe is a sorry little affair unless it has in it something or every age to investigate... Nature does not reveal her mysteries once and for all.

Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth. The parable of His Light is as if there were a Niche within it a Lamp; the Lamp enclosed in Glass; the glass as it were a brilliant star; Light from published Time, an Olive, neither of the east nor of the west, whose oil is well-nigh Luminous, though fire scarce touched it: Light upon Light! Allah guides whom he will to His Light. Allah sets forth Parables for men, and Allah knows all things.

(Quran, 24:35)

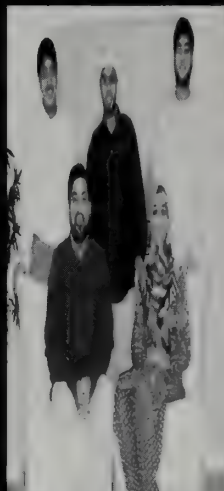

He (Muhammad) is like the sun, small to the eye when seen from afar,
But when glimpsed close up, it dazzles and overwhelms.
How can slumberous souls in this world grasp his reality,
Distracted as they are by the strength of their dreams?

Sooner or later we all discover that the important moments in life are not the advertised ones, not the birthdays, the graduations, the weddings, not the great goals achieved. The real milestones are less prepossessing. They come to the door of memory unannounced, stray dogs that amble in, sniff around a bit and simply never leave. Our lives are measured by these.

When you can't find the light,
That got you through the cloudy days,
When the stars ain't shinin' bright,
You feel like you've lost you're way,
When those candle lights of home,
Burn so very far away,
Well you got to let your soul shine,
Just like my daddy used to say.

He used to say soulshine,
It's better than sunshine,
It's better than moonshine,
Damn sure better than rain.
Hey now people don't mind,
We all get this way sometime,
Got to let your soul shine, shine till the break of day.

I grew up thinkin' that I had it made,
Gonna make it on my own.
Life can take the strongest man,
Make him feel so alone.
Now and then I feel a cold wind,
Blowin' through my achin' bones,
I think back to what my daddy said,
He said boy, in the darkness before the dawn:

Sometimes a man can feel this emptiness,
Like a woman has robbed him of his very soul.
A woman too, God knows, she can feel like this.
And when your world seems cold, you got to let your spirit take control.

Oh, it's better than sunshine,
It's better than moonshine,
Damn sure better than rain.
Yeah now people don't mind,
We all get this way sometimes,
Gotta let your soul shine, shine till the break of day.

From the boisterous halls of Foxcroft,
And the silence of Northern Quebec,

Testing the intricacies of German grammar,
And laying a fire in the rain with wet wood,

Re-exploring Holland by train,
And exercising every angle on the squash
court,

Carrying a canvas canoe for a mile or more,
Burning the midnight oil night after night,

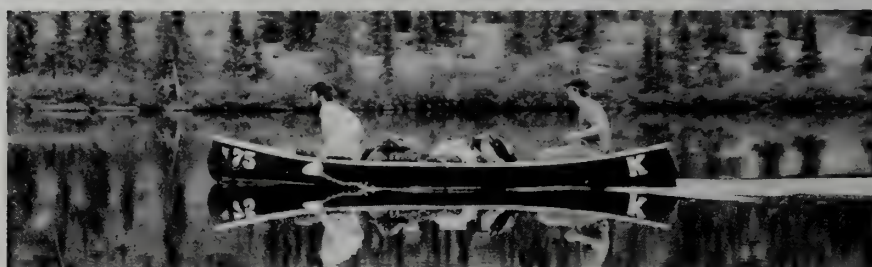

We know you for your enthusiasm and energy,
Your support and kind words and deeds,

You are never at a loss of words or ideas.
Never be at a loss for new ideas!

Never stop exploring new angles!
Never stop doing things your own way!

Congratulations on a chapter well-completed!

Marcella Ellen Viktorin

Class of '05

She was born 50 years old, as we say in Texas.

An old soul trapped in a new body.

She has always shown such compassion and love, even as a small child.

She taught me lessons all along the way.

She started high school at the age of 13, the first day of 9th grade being that infamous day, 9-11-2001;

She was so far away from home but I was the one locked in fear.

She has never been homesick and always comfortable wherever she landed, at peace in her own skin - happy, diligent, friendly and kind.

Marcella, I am so proud that you have grown into the person you are today. I am fiercely proud of your enthusiasm and convinced you will make a difference in this world. There is a saying that "the heat of fire reveals the purest gold" and your work ethic and determination have enabled you to persevere when others quit. I pray that you always treasure your education and never stop learning. You are our beloved only child and May God Bless you on your graduation day and always!

"I love you forever; I like you for always; As long as I'm living.."

Sims, you have been a wonderful sister over the years to me...with a few exceptions like the time you dressed me as a girl; painted me purple and brown with fingerpaints; made me take part in your stupid plays (until I was old enough to refuse), and you actually encouraged me to send that stupid poem to my first girlfriend. You've always swayed to the music of your own beat., conquering with determination each and every new feat. You dazzle us not only with your fancais, sporting skills and musical talents; but also with your dry wit, argumentative flair, and the ability to remain so balanced. We are so proud of the way you've matured and grown. (Although we do wish you'd be a bit more organized and chat with us on the phone.) Watching you survive through four years at Andover has been inspirational & insightful, We couldn't be happier that your journey has been adventurous, delightful, and above all successful. We wish you and your classmates a fabulous voyage from here on. May you embark on experiences that teach you the meaning of hard work, the lovely pains of laughter and the giddiness that comes with having fun.

As your quest for academic knowledge continues may you find the wisdom to make the right choices, may all your goals be met, much joy in exploring a new world of knowledge. Andover has been a treasure of knowledge, life experiences, lasting friendships, and sooooo much fun.

Let Go

Prepare yourself, for the end is near.

As a class, '05 saw the end of 5am morning sign-out, unchaperoned Ryley room dances, Andover Video, Evans and its stuffed-bird collection, and the burning "A." We witnessed the construction of Gelb and two new hockey rinks and watched the Bell Tower be dismantled. In our time at PA, internet music-sharing went from being a heavenly free-for-all to a D.C.-worthy offense. These days, Garver is no longer a silent study room. "Basics" doesn't exist and has been replaced with "Fit." School-wide announcements, once delivered by voicemail went digital as our email boxes were flooded with notices. We got got cheaped out on our long distance service, but countless dorms underwent facelifts. Our football team, formerly unstoppable, weakened, as did our boys basketball squad. "Babs and Bobby," otherwise known as Mrs. Chase and Mr. Edwards, serenaded us at All School Meeting, twice. We sat through countless assemblies and listened, or tuned out, as visiting lecturers told us how special we were and what an exceptional place Andover is. When we were freshmen, and before she became a celebrity, Paris Hilton attended the Andover prom. A former President, a Dispatch drummer, and a Muppets puppeteer came to visit us. The Class of '05 has seen some unforgettable sites, and the view from the top is a good one. We'll miss so many things—blue test booklets, the sleeping room, Cluster munches, long, drawn-out Sunday brunches, Grasshopper Nights, parietals, 10 o'clock sign in, car permission, facebook, PANet, and day excuses. We know there are some restrictions we won't miss. But then there are the feelings we'll say goodbye to, the little pleasures like an awaiting package in the mailroom, a totally PC (no grinding allowed!) dance with that special someone, and extended senior sign-in on Friday nights. We'll miss cramming around the TV on OC Thursdays, say goodbye to conference period and PAPs. No longer will we fear restriction or work duty. Ice Cream Night and MeatstiK will be things of the past, distant memories. But we won't forget our time here, we'll look back with fond feelings and affection for our alma mater and for each other. Andover's past and present are unending, our ties span not only backwards but forwards, into the future. We'll grow up and get old and change a great deal, but we'll always credit Phillips Academy as an instrumental part of our intellectual and emotional development. There is a reason for all the hype, folks, we are the best, the brightest, the cream of the crop, as we're so often told. At PA we've learned to multi-task, to prioritize, to kick and fight our way to the top. And it hasn't all been handed to us. We've worked hard for our victories, which has made them, along with every partnership and pact formed in Andover's storied halls, all the sweeter, stronger, and more real.

ANDOVER 23, YALE '07 0.

(Special Dispatch to the Sunday Herald)

ANDOVER, Oct. 31, 1908. Phillips Andover defeated Yale freshmen today, 23 to 0. Yale's defence proved to be a strong proposition for Andover, and for a time she was unable to gain. After Andover once struck her gait, however, Yale could not hold her.

Yale got no nearer Andover's goal than the 30-yard line from which point a goal from a place kick was tried by Hapin, but it failed.

Capt. Humbird's shoulder was injured toward the end of the game and Sumner and Cates, former Andover players, put up a star game for Yale. Robinson played a strong game at full-back and Hutchinson, the Yale quarterback, did creditable work.

Cummings and Bartholomew gained more ground than the other Andover backs. In the line Brown, Thompson and Austin excelled for Andover. The line-up:

ANDOVER STUDENTS CON-
Young Men Who Came to Town
Celebrate Apologize for Interrup-
Performance at Globe Theatre.

A party of students from the Plain Andover Academy attended the performance at the Globe Theatre on Saturday afternoon, bent upon having a little time after the fashion of students. The first act some of the academy who were occupying the lower left the theatre for a few minutes when the second act of "Sergeant" began, two of the party began to themselves obnoxious to the people on the stage.

The curtain was rung down and two young men were requested to go to the box. They left the theatre, accompanied by a number of their company. Stage Manager Harry Stone then appeared before the curtain and the audience thought the company was ready to proceed with the performance. The students were ready to behave properly. The curtain was rung up, and the performance went on.

Two of the instructors of the army were in the audience and were annoyed at the conduct of the one of them sent the following to Miss Earl, the star of the comedy:

To Mr. and Mrs. Earl: Will you please offer an apology for the senseless beating of two boys in one of the boxes this noon? I regret extremely the manner you and your company by their bad behavior. Their comrades are ashamed at their behavior, and hope that you consider their conduct as in any way negative of you and your company was fair today. Besides me, they all regard pardonable discourtesy as quite apart from general feeling. Even the boys wear the pennies mean nothing in disapproval. They were excited and liked the play. They were excited and liked like children, are sorry you saw us as to believe them.

CHARLES H. JONES

A number of the students also at Miss Earl's hotel and left letter of apology.

Resident Manager Smith

Enough, we certainly would not have a handful of college students to sit with any performance given at the Globe Theatre under any circumstances and certain statements made by the audience was dismissed before the performance had been completed. As to the management of the theatre, the college boys are always welcome to the theatre, but they must conduct themselves as gentlemen while there.

Spring Term

Spring. The season of fun, sun, and a little dabble of love. With the disappearance of Daylight Saving Time and the heaps of dirty snow piled on the side of Salem Street, Andoverites everywhere suddenly realize that yes, natural light does exist, and that the final stretch of yet another year has laid itself before us. As we walk out of the doors of Sam Phil, for us, the season of spring is magnificently displayed in bright green, light blue, and brilliant yellow – bright green are the trees and the grass (thank you chemical fertilizers), light blue is the carefree sky above our heads, and brilliant yellow the ever-so-present sun in our eyes.

But spring is also green, blue, and yellow in the many hearts around campus. Seniors yearn for greener pastures in the collegiate world, Uppers face their inner blues as they deal with the triple threat of work, colleges, and activities, while Lower and Juniors are nurtured under the gleaming yellow sunlight into maturity.

As frisbees, lawn chairs, and sunglasses are deployed to the midst of the dazzling frenzy of Senior fun, we are all reminded that this is our chance (and for some of us our last chance) to... walk on a little bit of sunshine.

Student Life

By Sarah Hong '05

After surviving blistering snow and wind from winter term, Andover is ready to welcome in the spring. Each weekend is filled with senior concerts, speakers and different clubs throwing workshops and events. The Student Activities office make sure that there is always something to look forward to during the week. Even Uppers, with hours of homework and standardized tests to study for, find themselves out enjoying all that Spring Term has to offer.

With the Spring Fling in the back of Mrs. Chase's house, Uppers can celebrate the closing of the year and look forward to all the joys that Senior Year can offer. Soon afterwards, Seniors put on their best attire and party the night away in Boston for their senior prom. It is one of the last years for Prom to be on the boat, which makes the night all the more special.

When commencement comes around, the Class of '05 gathers together for the last time as fellow students. As the diplomas are passed, it is clear that seniors, despite their bittersweet experiences, are ready to finish their Andover career. Through all the activities, Andover enjoys every minute of this spring.

Black + White

One dance, two colors, three hours of fun

Braving the rain on their way to Commons, students gathered for the last open semi-formal dance of the year. (You can't forget the Abbot Ball and PROM!) Decked out in their finest black/white/some combination of the two, students eagerly made their way to the Black and White sponsored by CAMD. The most memorable event was the dance-off that erupted in the middle. People gathered to watch Zach Johnson '08, Adam Draper '07, and Travis Wright '08, take on Andrew Yankes '08 in a head-to-head, no-holds-barred battle, which of course ended peacefully at the conclusion of the song. As a whole, students enjoyed the break from the hectic spring and had fun being able to dance and listen to music.

Spring Fling

Uppers do the Seniority thing

After two grueling months filled to the brim with APs, history papers, tests, and just plain old homework, Uppers were finally rewarded with a sliver of Seniority. They changed into their dress shirts, blazers, and sleek dresses before heading down to Mrs. Chase's backyard for the Upper Spring Fling - a sneak preview of the many Senior events to come. Everybody present was glad to take a moment of relief from work and for the opportunity to be with friends on one of the few sunny days of the term, while Mr. and Mrs. Chase made the rounds and chatted with almost every Upper. It was a very nice chance for the Class of '06 to hang out, bond, share some class spirit, and enjoy the live music in a beautiful environment.

Abbot Ball

Waltz into a different world

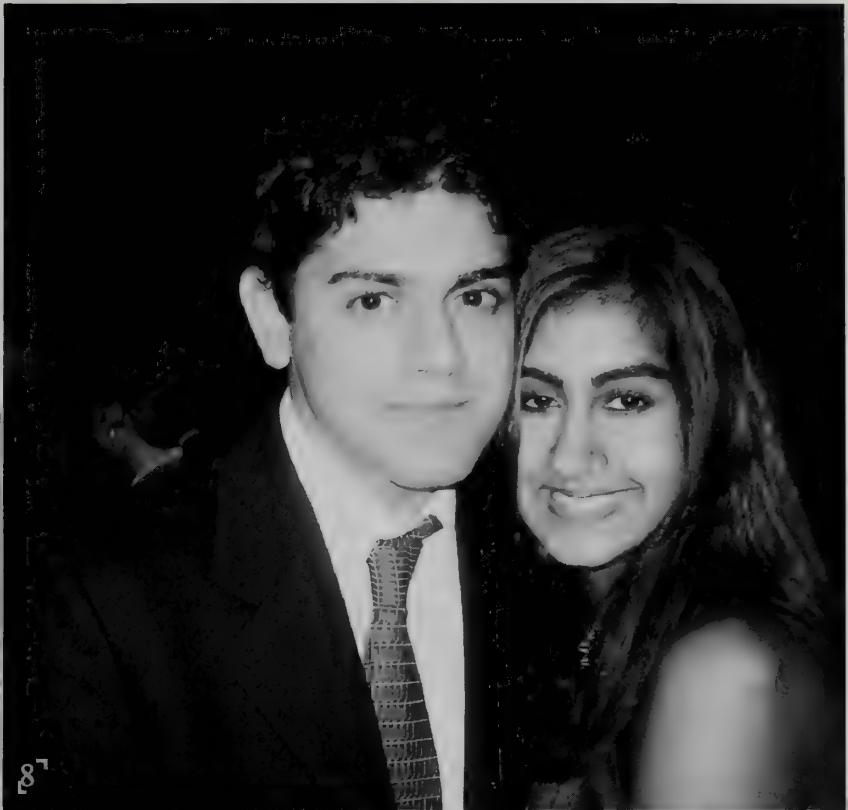

The Abbot Ball did things a little different this year with Neville Williams, '05 as cluster president. Once again, the Abbot Ball was open to all clusters and all classes. However, this year the dance provided a shuttle to McKeen Hall from Commons within the first hour of the dance. The Commons portion of the Abbot Ball served as a pre-party, keeping students busy drinking "martinis" while waiting for their "carriage" to drop them off at the dance. Although the fee was a tad bit more expensive this year, the Abbot Ball proved well worth the price as couples danced the night away.

Knock the Exies off their feet!

On the last Saturday of spring term '05, Andover students welcomed some of their first glimmers of weekend sunshine all term by beating Exeter at girls' and boys' lacrosse, softball, and girls' track. The new 2006 Blue Key Heads decked themselves out in blue, filled their hands with blue sharks, and supported the teams, while senior athletes battled in the last games of their PA athletic careers. A long rain shower ended Andover-Exeter and washed off the blue face paint, but not the smiles of victorious Andover students.

Spring Carnival

Last day of classes... fun times on the Knoll

As the final day of classes came to a close, students made their way down to the Spring Carnival in the Knoll for four hours of fun and food before exam week began. The high point of the afternoon was the long-awaited annual Blue Key Head Jello-wrestling match that occurred in a kiddie pool filled with blue Jello. # Commencement

Taking the last step...

On a spectacular Sunday morning, the Class of 2005 gathered outside of Samuel Phillips Hall for the last time they would be together as a group. The weather was perfect - blue skies, blazing sun, no clouds for miles. The guys donning blue blazers could have wished for something cooler, but nonetheless, it was the epitome of graduation weather. The Seniors, in a mass of white collared shirts and romantic white dresses (with the occasional odd quirk like a pair of white wings), followed their teachers in file across the Great Lawn. There were the usual speeches and the passing of diplomas, and everybody searched for some closure amid a few tears and much celebration. The ceremony soon ended, leaving the class to mingle together for one last time before they dispersed as Phillips Academy graduates into a big, big world.

People

Spring! Birds chirp, flowers bloom, and bears and squirrels come out of their caves. Freshman learn to violate lights out, lowers become more pubescently accomplished, uppers take the reins, growing into their roles as campus leaders, and seniors reap the rewards for eleven intense “academic” terms at Andover.

The weather brings out the best in everyone. It sounds like something Mrs. Chase would say but it's true. Smiles and waves abound from strangers, the winter uniform-skirts and ugg boots-miraculously morphs into skirts and flip-flops. As one male lower artfully put it, “They wear so little during the winter, it's fun to see them try to wear less in the spring...somehow, they pull it off...thankfully.”

Spring is also a time to enjoy the wonders of the great lawn. Many seniors relax and play meatstiK...and although the PG's fail to perform as well as expected on the great lawn field, they undoubtedly bring the crowds. Whether it's tennigolf, frisbee golf, meatstiK, learning to sleep again, or just hanging out with friends, spring term is a time to recap, rejuvenate, and will always be a time to remember.

Lauren Seno '05

"We went surfing, rented scooters, went canoeing, and ascended a huge mountain. The best part about [spring break] was getting to hang out with people from school in a totally different environment. # Spring Break

Don't let the sun walk all over you

Venturing to "hot spots" all around the world, PA students were able to blow off all their pent-up energy from being indoors all winter. Whether in Costa Rica, Mexico, or Europe, or working on a community service project in South Carolina, students enjoyed the break from campus and refueled before the final push to end the year.

Senior Spring

It's finally time to shine

Senior Spring. The only term that every student actually looks forward to; the term juniors can only dream about, lowers anticipate, uppers pray for and seniors live during their final weeks as PA students. Seniors dominate the campus with the infamous meatstiK games, Saturday night parties at Nate Scott's house and, most importantly, prom! Though there are still classes to attend and senior pro (shudder) to watch out for, there is no doubt that Senior Spring is the king of terms.

Music and Theatre

Taking giant steps in the arts

Spring term is especially emotional for music and theatre participants. The term showcases the culmination of their year-long efforts, and for many seniors, their farewell shows draw the curtain on very successful four-year runs at PA. Notable events this spring included the hybrid of the Dance Open and Broadway Revue – Skyline, the Africa-bound Theatre 520 production Things Fall Apart, the release of the joint CD by a cappella groups The Yorkies and Azure, and what WPAA Faculty Advisor Craig Thorn called the “best Battle of the Bands in recent years.”

Jason Saunders '05

"It was so worth it to just get up on stage and spill your soul in front of the audience. It was special for me because of the strong emotional attachments I had for Things Fall Apart and for my character, and I think the audience really appreciated what we actors had to bring to the table."

Spring brings sun, new energy, and championship fever to the PA campus. Andover teams turn up the heat in competition from the Softball fields at Isham all the way to the rivers where the Crew teams rage.

Big Blue Baseball is consistently tops in New England, setting the pace for the other spring teams. Outdoor Track is the team to beat year after year, running through rain and heat for one more championship, after an incredible four-peat. The boys' and girls' Lacrosse teams never stop their quest for domination of the fields. With the churn of wheels, the clinks of putters, and breathtaking throws, Cycling, Golf, and Ultimate Frisbee are no less spirited in their pursuit for the big "W."

Even inside, out of the sun, there is no end to the heat. Many of them fall and winter Varsity players, FIT athletes seek physical perfection in the gym. Boys' Volleyball and girls' Water Polo have the fever too, throwing it down against their opponents. PA sports just can't be stopped once that spring heat turns into championship fever.

Girls Lacrosse

With 19 hardworking talented, enthusiastic, and dedicated players, the 2005 Girls' Lacrosse team looks to have a great season this year. Along with our returnees, we had 9 new additions that contributed a lot and helped add depth to our team. With such a versatile team backed by an amazing goalie, our expectations for the season are high. We have proved to have a great defense that gave our opponents a lot of trouble, a smooth transitioning midfield, and a balanced offense that led to multiple girls scoring every game. It's going to be an amazing season and we're going to enjoy every minute of it. ACES.

Softball

Over the past few years the softball team has made great strides of improvement, and this year in particular those strides led to a great season. Experienced players and potential talent combined to bring a cohesive and competitive team to the field. From pitching to cheering there was respect and support for whatever each individual player brought to the game. The team played well against weak and strong opponents and was always making improvements – each game made them more competitive and enthusiastic to work as a team.

Baseball

The baseball team this year had a lot of seniors (10 seniors and 2 PGs out of 17 players total), so it was a relatively old team, but it started out as a relatively inexperienced team on the field nonetheless. Without the kind of superstar players it had in the recent past, it became a much more balanced team. As Coach McGraw put it, we had a very "democratic ballclub." At the beginning of the season, wins did not come very easily. It took a couple of games to get defense and hitting into shape. But one thing the team never lacked was a competitiveness that you can't teach. Despite sub-par execution at times early on, it managed to pull out some dramatic comebacks, and the momentum from those wins has carried through until now, and things really seem to be falling into place (knock on wood). If we can maintain the level of play we've displayed in the last two weeks, we could really surprise some people come tournament time.

Girls' Tennis

The girls' varsity tennis team had a very strong season. With the addition of one new player and the return of everyone from last year, it was able to start the season off strong. There was an incredible depth of this team in both singles and doubles. After finishing 7th at Interschols last year, we truly believe and are working hard to win the tournament this year – even if it takes a team run down to Friendly's, we are more than willing to go the extra mile.”

Sarah Chang '05

Boys' Tennis

Though our players averaged maybe a buck ten on the scales, we proved to be a formidable squad. In the words of Russell Dykema (Captain, '04), we could "dig deep" and overcome difficult players mentally. Our strength this year lay in the depth of our ladder and our toughness. Code Names – Gaucho, Wagonmania, Magnum, Agro, SCHUBIE, Slice, Silent, Blue – We could all 'spank that puppydog.'

Girls' Crew

The crew this year was a force to be reckoned with. The team's fitness, skill, dedication and commitment give it a leg up on other teams. They worked hard and on race day, had confidence in our training. Both the first and second boats, had amazing seasons. Andover girls' crew can still dominate.

Boys' Crew

Coming off of last year's strength, Andover boys' crew proved that a relatively young team had the talent and power to be the best in the league. Quickly destroying any doubt, boys' crew began the season ahead of the competition and dominated the 2005 season.

Golf

Andover's golf team won the Lovell Cup and Witherspoon Bowl once again this year for retiring Coach Smith's last season. With strong players throughout the lineup, particularly Zack "The Hack" Sandman in the number 19 non-starter position, this season's roster was as deep as it is handsome/beautiful.

Cycling

With a two-year legacy of being Men's A New England Champions thanks to '03 and '04 racers, and no captain to start off the season, Andover cycling's season was uncertain to say the least. Yet, with the highest turnout in recent years, the Andover cycling team pulled through strong this year. The Men's A pack, led by underclassmen James Krendel-Clark, Colin Touhey, Mike Monaco, Andy Clay, and senior Andy St. Louis, consistently proved that they could fill the gap left by last year's seniors. The Women's A racers also found success this season as the one of the top girls' teams in New England, led by Lilli Stein and Arielle Filiberti.

Without a doubt the seniors are important as leaders on the team and have an important job in setting an example for all the younger students. But I'd broaden that responsibility to include all of the veteran runners. Our team had a lot of drive and potential. We wanted to compete. Exeter, Taft, Choate – they have a history of fantastic athletes, and they always present Andover with a challenge, but this team had the right stuff: the determination, the desire to compete. I'm going to miss this team!

-Captain Annie Wilkin '05

Boys & Girls Track

The PA track team is almost always very deep, with athletes from all grade levels scoring points for the team. The seniors, because they contribute to all teams with their leadership and experience, usually add talent and depth. As far as winning Interschols goes, it's always a challenge. With dedication, participation, and hard work, it shouldn't be too much of a challenge, though.

-Captain Kojo DeGraft-Hanson '05

Waterpolo

The 2005 girls water polo team retained a significant amount of its talent from last year and was also blessed with a very strong junior class. Though much of our team was young, we had a wide range of experience from both the West Coast and the East Coast. Hopefully this variety in our backgrounds will allow us to approach the game in a very comprehensive and integrated fashion, leading us to successful seasons for years to come.

Volleyball

First of all, I would like to say that there are too many people named Alex on the team. I mean, I just don't know who the ball is going to anymore. Joking aside, I think this year marked the beginning of a new volleyball era. To our surprise, we had an incredible number of newcomers bring a lot of experience to the team to make this year's team the most cohesive we've had in a long time. I look forward to winning seasons in the upcoming years.

Ultimate

After a somewhat disappointing 2004 season, in which the Andover Ultimate team posted a sub .500 record, the boys bounced back in 2005, boasting a team long on athleticism but short on experience. Led by returning seniors Jesse Seegers '05 and Ben Heller '05, the team featured a total of six returning players, but only one of last year's starting seven. Nevertheless, the 2005 Ultimate Team showed true grit and perseverance, and with the addition of seniors Ryan McDougal '05, Chris Herlic '05, and tall man Jay Geary '05, the Big Blue improved upon the 2004 season with leaps and bounds.

MeatstiK

MeatstiK

By Mackenzie King '05

Spelled with a lower case "m", a capital "k" and no "c", meatstiK is a game of wits, flawless coordination, and raw skill, just ask all-star Alex Lebow '05. Created in the spring of 2003 by a select few lower boys, looking to define their grade, impress attractive senior girls, and avoid their chemistry homework, the game of meatstiK quickly gained a following and found a home in the northwest corner of the great lawn.

Why do we play meatstiK? For us, meatstiK is the American pastime, the Andover tradition, an opportunity to play as a team, loyalty to our class, and even more specifically something we are good at. We may not be as ruggedly handsome as the class of 2008, as socially successful as the class of 2007 or as athletically gifted as the class of 2006, but at any time, on any given day, we can smack the living hell out of a tennis ball with a certain black plastic bat. This is the greatest game ever, these are the greatest kids ever, this is the greatest class ever, and this is our Andover.
